Cooking and Meat Eating and Prehistoric Pottery

Mass first food, if habits of ancestral apes be any evidence, must have been insects, fruits and succulent plants, none of which are improved by cooking, says the New York Herald Tribune. Cooking and meat eating may have come in together; perhaps the latter because discovery of the properties of fire showed how meat could be made more palatable and easier to chew. After this came another pair of inventions that must have been almost simultaneous—agriculture and pottery. The first pots cannot have been cooking vessels, for the simple reason that a very good quality of pot is needed to withstand both fire and water. Many archeologists have speculated, reasonably and no doubt truly, that the first stimulus to pot making must have been need of storing food of some kind. The food most likely to need this is grain, the tiny seeds of which are so easily lost without some impermeable container.

The Crocodile's Dentist

The crocodile, living in the water as it does, is subject to attacks by leeches which enter the saurian's mouth and attach themselves to the tongue and walls of the cavity. The parasites might in time become a nuisance to the reptile were it not for the activities of a bird known as the nile bird. This feathered dentist is always on hand when the crocodiles decide the time has arrived for a mouth-cleaning and climb on the banks of the rivers they inhabit and open their huge jaws. The birds enter the cavity fearlessly and pick off all the leeches, and, having completed the operation, depart with a thank you for the meal, while the crocodile returns the compliment with a thank you for the mouth-cleaning.

Zoo Ostrich Had Odd Appetite

Amazing results followed a post-mortem examination of the stomach of Jessie the Ostrich, a famous denizen of the London zoo. Even the officials marveled. They found three handkerchiefs, one child's glove, one lady's glove, four pennies, one half-crown, one halfpenny, thirteen nails, one lead pencil, six screws, two staples, five washers, four yards of string and three buttons.

Cost of World War

According to the Treasury department report published in May, 1919, the total cost of the World war between April, 1917, and April, 1919, was $21,850,000,000. During the last ten months of the war, the average daily United States expenditure was $44,700,000.

Gangrene From Exposure

Gangrene from exposure to cold occurs more often in the temperate zone than in the Arctic regions.

Reducing Sunlight Would Reveal Beauty of Earth

If the rays of sunlight could be reduced to a deep twilight, the ultra-violet rays radiating with the same intensity as at noon, the world would become indescribably weird and lovely, according to an official of the Smithsonian institution, says Pathfinder Magazine. Amethyst mountains, golden streets and rose-colored cities would be seen.

This phenomenon is in progress all the time, but the eye cannot see it, for the visible rays of light drown out the invisible ultra-violet rays. The proper condition can be produced artificially, however.

Such experiments have a practical use, for the powerful ultra-violet rays set up a molecular agitation which causes minerals to "fluoresce," the color of the fluorescence depending upon the sensitivity of that particular kind of rock or metal. Each element has its own particular color under the ray, and the chunk of stone or ore which might take days to analyze chemically, may be made to reveal its contents instantaneously by the way it fluoresces.

Rain Checks for Automobiles

There is a prevalent superstition among automobile owners that it always rains just after the car has been washed. That is the excuse some drivers have for dirty cars. In Kansas City there is a car-washing plant where a rain check is given with each car-washing operation. If it rains within 24 hours, bring your car back and get another wash.

Westminster Abbey Known as the Royal Cemetery

The site of Westminster abbey has been occupied by a church for more than thirteen centuries. The beginnings of the present abbey, however, date to the reign of Edward the Confessor, who had a palace at Westminster, and who, between 1040 and 1065 built a church here, dedicated to St. Peter. From this circumstance comes the present official name of Westminster abbey—the Collegiate Church of St. Peter.

Edward the Confessor, who died in 1066, was the first monarch to be buried there, and his shrine, erected by Henry III, is one of the most celebrated there.

Since Edward's time the abbey has been several times reconstructed, restored and enlarged, some of this work having been done as recently as 1880.

In Westminster abbey lie buried thirteen kings and five sovereign queens, besides the consorts and descendants of kings.

Crows Menace to Wild Game Birds

That the crow is a terrible menace to waterfowl has been proved by school children of western Canada, who helped local authorities make a survey of wild fowl nests on the nesting grounds.

No Lifelong Promises

No lifelong vows are permitted in the Buddhist Monastic order, any member of which is at liberty to leave at any time.

Municipal Plants Must Pay 2 Per Cent Tax on Water

Joseph J. Rice, director of the state department of finance, has ruled that the two per cent sales tax must be paid by private and municipally owned utility companies supplying electricity, gas and water to patrons for use or consumption.

Speaker at Insurance Convention

Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. Schwemm left Thursday morning for Lake Wawasee, Ind., where Mr. Schwemm will attend the Equitable Life Assurance Society's convention. Insurance meetings are scheduled for Friday and Saturday. Mr. Schwemm will be one of the speakers. The convention inaugurates the Equitable Life's seventy-fifth anniversary.

$1,866,876 Collected on Sales Tax for July

Collections totaling $1,866,876 had been made up to and including August 24 on the first month's 2 per cent sales tax, according to Joseph J. Rice, state director of finance.

This amount was collected from 81,116 merchants in the state, he said. Additional returns are being received daily. Mr. Rice estimated that there are more than 100,000 retailers in the state subject to the tax, and he said action is being taken to compel the delinquent merchants to file a return.

The returns were on sales made during July. Failure to file a return is punishable by a fine of 25 per cent, plus 2 per cent additional per month for delinquency. Returns on sales made during August must be filed not later than September 15.

The revenue from the tax is to be devoted to the relief of the idle for the first six months of the two-year period the tax will be in effect. The funds will be spent by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

Exhibit Shows How Prisoners Are Taught New Trades

How inmates of Illinois' six penal and refractory institutions receive thorough training in the skilled trades, equipping them to earn an adequate livelihood, when they emerge from confinement, was convincingly portrayed in the department of public welfare's exhibit in the conservation building at the state fair. The prison industries' exhibit was under the supervision of Mrs. Dorothy Kay, assistant director of public welfare.
