CAN CONGRESS FINISH?

Must talk is heard of the probability of an extra session of Congress soon after the short session which will end next March. Many believe that it will be impossible to Many believe that it will be impossible to finish necessary legislation this winter. Much will depend, of course, upon the at-titude of certain groups which have pet mea-sures to advance, or others to oppose. It ap-pears quite evident that President Hoover pears quite evident that resident nover will call an extra session with extreme re-luctance, if at all, but if obstructionist tac-tics are pursued by those Senators of both parties who seem to delight in throwing mon-key wrenches into the legislative machine, may be forced to it.

It is a foregone conclusion that the pres economic situation will be the subject of th debate, and that all sorts of remedies much decate, and that all sorts of remedies will be proposed in bills to be offered.

The farm relief question is by no means settled, in spite of the present law, passed after several years of wind-jamming on the subjected to much criticism, and many osals will be made for modifying the ex sting set-up.

Senator Wagner's long pending unem Senator Wagner's long pending unemployment bills will have a new airing. Apprespriations for prohibition enforcement will large increase of automobile wrecks caused laweitably bring on a lot of talk. New bills will be thrown to the legislative hopper as a result of almost innumerable recent investigations by committees of both houses. to be remembered that the ar bills, providing appropriations for all departments of the government, must be passed. It has been broadly hinted that some of these will be deliberately obstructed in order to compel the calling of a special seasion. Opponents of the administration deny this, but demials or statements of politicians, whether on one side or the other, may be taken with several grains of salt.

So, pverything considered, the question of whether Congress can finish the imperative tasks before it by March 4 is a very lively
