Fighting at Close Quarters.

Predictions by those who thought that improved guns, especially the high power rifle, would put an end to war through increase of fatalities have turned out false. Men with their mad up do not stop to count the wounded, nor do they expect to make "an omelet without breaking eggs."

The attention given by military trainers to the Japanese science of wrestling shows that personal encounters are expected to be a feature in future wars. If daylight charges against modern armor prove too costly, attacks will be made at night, and night attacks usually carry home and lead to personal encounters.

One grave problem in the old style of warfare was to keep the men steady in formation. The tendency was for the individual to break loose and rush ahead, fighting on his own hook. Not being trained to that, he went in blind, and the result was confusion in the ranks.

The enormous cost of modern war and the deadliness of new weapons should deter nations from going to war except from the noblest motives. Having a cause which they deem just, men will fight desperately, and a struggle fought to the death under modern conditions will call for close-quarter encounters, with bayonet, clubbed musket and hand grenade.

England and Japan.

English government or ministerial organs are vehemently urging a declaration by the powers that be or are to be of the attitude to be maintained toward the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Japan's conduct with Korea can be excused by all nations except Russia and England as justifiable in the nature of things. England could have found cause in that for terminating the alliance before this date had she been so disposed.

One thing noticeable in the comments of the British press upon the alliance is the exclusive influence awarded that compact regarding the Far Eastern war within definite limits. No credit is given to the United States for preserving the neutrality and integrity of China.

American apples continue to hold the market in England in spite of the fact that the home growers have several fine varieties, which are of superior flavor, long keepers, of good size and beautiful to behold.

The American fruit grower knows how to attract the purchaser by uniformity in size and quality in every bush. English growers have hardly begun to learn, and use in the way of the English product hardly finds one purchaser at a county fairs where the American fruit finds at double the price.

If the Ziegler polar expedition, now supposed to be leeward near Franz Josef Land, is found by the rescue party, the fact will warrant the belief that stations from the present point maintained at the farthest north and regular ship operations carried on until the great polar mystery is solved. So long as men are willing to contribute money and their fellows are ready to take the risks of life there can be a series of stations established around the pole and a line back to civilization, each supporting the other, communicating at least once a year and flitting the chance of disaster.

Lincoln and Slavery.

President Roosevelt's oftand declaration in a letter to a friendly society that Lincoln "fought to abolish slavery" has been followed by a spirited discussion in the press as to the fate of the issuance of the emancipation proclamation and the military situation at the time. It has been assumed by some that because the proclamation went into effect on Jan. 1, 1863, it was issued at that time. Had the proclamation been delayed until that date it probably would not have been issued until after Gettysburg, July, 1863. At least this is the conclusion to be drawn from the history of the proclamation.

Lincoln's attitude toward slavery is a part of our history, since it is well known that he declared that he would save that institution or destroy it, according as the fate of slavery might determine the fate of the Union. He placed the salvation of the Union above all else. The facts are that during the summer of 1862 Lincoln prepared the proclamation and said that the emancipation of the slaves was a substantial victory. He visited the battlefield at Antietam, Md. (fought Sept. 17, 1862), on the 10th of September, returned to Washington and on Sept. 22 issued the proclamation, which, by the way, did not abolish slavery or profess to do so.

By the terms of the proclamation slavery would cease to exist on Jan. 1, 1863, in those states of the Confederacy which did not lay down their arms and return to the allegiance to the constitution before that date. Those slave holding states not then separated from the Union, as Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri and parts of Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina, were not affected by the proclamation and continued to maintain slavery until they abolished the institution by state enactment. Thus it happened that during the proclamation was in effect slaves held in bondage, nursed, fed and otherwise well cared for Federal soldiers.

It will be seen that the proclamation applied solely to territory within the Federal lines, and it remained for the Federal armies to give force to the act by invading and subjugating the slave holding territory. Before there was a reasonable prospect that the northern armies could and would invade and subjugate the slaveholding territory the issuance of the proclamation would have been vain and empty. For that reason Lincoln awaited a substantial success at arms.

Whether Antietam was a substantial military success has been disputed. General James Longstreet, who at the time was Lee's most trusted lieutenant, said that Antietam sprang the key of the arch upon which the Confederacy rested. It took place upon northern soil, the same as Gettysburg, and, like Gettysburg, was a repulse of an invading force. On Jan. 1, 1863, when the proclamation became a law of the land, the north apparently had the worst of the conflict. The Confederates had reconquered a portion of Tennessee and established a foothold at Murfreesboro as the result of...

"SAVED MY LIFE"

That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does is to do through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free. The doctor that prescribes this for you is a valid sign of the wrapper. Buy Scott's Emulsion from the doctor.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral at bedtime prevents night coughs of children. No croup. No bronchitis. A doctor's medicine for all affections of the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs. Sold in every drug store.

Keep the bowels open with one of Ayer's Pills at bedtime, just one. The high school of commerce is a move in the right direction if it only advertises the fact that commerce is not child's play. A certain number of business men are able to invest and train their sons to continue business at the old stand, but, as a rule, the recruits for the vast army of commerce drift into business expecting quick success and easy work.

The Mosely commission of English students came to the United States to study our educational system, expecting to find us a nation of rank materialists, and went away convinced that we are devoids, with a disdain of money upon its entrance, contenting upon this verdict, the Saturday Evening Post says that the American passion for money getting is purely idealistic, "love of the game and love of distinction."

A nice point is raised by the decision of a Chicago sodas that a pig must not be carried by the ears and tail, because one carried for the entertainment of the court squealed lustily. Only a wise perker can tell whether the squealing was caused by discomfort or by joy over the sensation created. A talking pig might be added to the staff of court interpreters.

Shoek For a Cowboy. Skinner Humphrey of Broken Timber, Mont., passed through Chicago recently on route home from the Exposition, accompanied by his wife. Mr. Humphrey, in company with "Long" Thompson of Garryowen, Fred Maxey of Crow Hills and "Slicker" Avery of White Creek, talked of nothing but the inaugural ball, says a Chicago dispatch.

"We got into the ball and the first thing we saw was a stunning woman cavorting across the floor with a fellow in a swell uniform. But the girl didn't appear to have any feeling for the fellow who looked cold and lost. Long Thompson turned his head away and blushed, something he hasn't done since he was a calf on the range of life. He whispers to us, especially to Slicker Avery, who was staring until his eyes began to bulge."

"That poor fellow's broke long without knowing how she looks. Give her a chance to duck."

"After a while she got up and went away. After we got through, she opens our eyes, and there's a hundred or more women skating around dressed like the first—nothing on but a 'corset' and a single blanket."

"I'm going to bed," says Maxey, "if I ever talk in my sleep after I get home and my old woman gets on to what singular things I've seen here it's all day."

50 Years of Success. This is our record. From a small beginning we have grown until our factories now cover many acres. Many of our machines sold forty to fifty years ago are still giving their users faithful service. Can anything be more convincing of their merits and durability than to see ever hear of any other line with such a record?

Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine No. 9. The Rotary Hook dispels the old, out-of-date, unmechanical and troublesome shuttle. The Frictionless ball bearings and perfect mechanical construction enable it to be operated with one third less exertion than is required by ordinary machines. It sews three yards of goods while a shuttle machine sews two.

It makes the most elastic and most perfect stitch whether sewing light or heavy goods. With our superior attachments the greatest variety of work is possible. Do not make the mistake of buying a sewing machine until you have given the Wheeler & Wilson No. 9 a trial. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.
