Coming in Late

Marion Harland, the noted writer, furnishes an article on the above topic, which article should be carefully considered by a number of people in this village who have contracted the habit of coming in late to entertainments, to church, and other public meetings. The author says: "It shows a lack of good breeding for man or woman to make a bid for attention by waiting until the entertainment or service is in progress and then march up to the front and disturb the audience by searching for their seats. It is a direct bid for attention. No woman should make such an exhibition of herself, and certainly no real lady will think of doing so unless, perhaps she has an attack of vanity, and parades for effect. Some men have the habit, but only those who have given the rule of proper etiquette but little attention, thus make themselves the subjects of comment."

We might add to the opinion thus expressed but refrain from so doing. If the people in this village who are afflicted with the habit could hear the comment on their reasons for always interrupting an entertainment or church service they would either stop the practice or remain at home.

Home, Sweet Home.

When tired, go home. When you want consolation, go home. When you want fun, go home. When you want to show others you have reformed, go home and let your family get acquainted with the fact. When you want to show yourself at the very best, go home and do the act there. When you feel like being extra liberal, go home and practice on your wife and children first. When you want to shine with more brilliancy than usual, go home and light the whole household. Home is the best place of all, if we would but make it so.

There Is a Difference

For two weeks past one has heard much discussion in reference to the action of certain gentlemen who caused a report on violation of the Sunday closing ordinance by saloons to be brought to the attention of the village board. Those who take the side of the liquor dealers use as an argument the fact that saloons are allowed to "run wide open in Chicago on Sunday."

That is true, but not one person out of 200 in this village know why the authorities of the big city allow such violation of state and municipal law. The question has been put to both republican and democratic nominees for mayor of that city and they have both taken the same view of the matter and both given the same reply to committees who have waited upon them, i. e., "that it is contrary to the wishes of the majority of the residents of the city, and that majorities should rule."

In 1872 the question was submitted to a vote and a majority of 35,000 votes cast in favor of "open on Sunday."

The question has never been directly voted on in this village, therefore the difference. There is little doubt of the verdict.

A contingent advocating a strict enforcement of the state law and village ordinance relative to Sunday closing, contend that the board of trustees has no right to "juggle" that ordinance to suit its convenience; that the license committee has no right to issue "special privileges which conflict with local or state law."

To those who view this matter, not as prohibitionists or friends of the liquor traffic, as favoring an enforcement of Section 7, Chapter 15 of the village ordinances, it looks as though the committee making complaint to the board desired to have that body pull the chestnuts out of the fire, relieving the complaining witnesses of the "obnoxious" part of its duty.

The law is so shaped that any citizen can make complaint to any justice of the peace in the village and the village attorney is in duty bound to prosecute in the name of the people. Again, if any officer of the village is not performing the duties of his position in accordance with his oath of office there is all kinds of law to make him do so or resign his office.

This talk that "village officials will not enforce the law; we don't know where they stand, etc.," is bosh. The officials of the village of Barrington are not playing to any special class of citizens. The citizen who has evidence that the ordinances are "outrageously violated" and does not prosecute the violation confesses that violation.

WHAT TO DO

"Hello Girl" Offers Telephone Subscribers Some Good Advice.

The following is taken from the Dundee Hawkeye, and will apply to the Barrington exchange:

If you have a telephone in your office or store, ring up central, and then go wait on a customer.

Take your time in answering a ring, or what is better, do not answer it at all, but in half an hour ring up and ask who called you; then get mad if central has forgotten. She has nothing else to do but remember.

If everything doesn't go just to suit you, damn central; she's used to it and it shows that you're a gentleman.

Never ring off when through talking as that would notify central you had finished. Let her guess at it.

Never say "please" or "thank you" to the operator. She is more used to being called names.

If central is unable to get the party you wish, blame the operator. Of course it's her fault.

Hang your receiver big end up, or, better yet, drop it or throw it down. Hang the transmitter with your lead pencil, or, if you haven't a pencil handy, take the stove poker. Open the generator box—if you haven't a key that will unlock it, take an axe—and if the interior does not look right, pull out a few wires and leave the door open. The suggestions in this paragraph, if closely followed, will improve the service wonderfully.

Finally, please paste these suggestions in your telephone for future reference, and oblige "A HELLO GIRL."

An Independent Vocation

The man who is the possessor of a piece of land has the game in his own hands. There is no promoter or stock gambler who can jeopardise his investment. Where it is purchased with judgment, land is always worth the money paid for it and it is found to increase in value. It can not be destroyed or carried away. It requries only industry to make it profitable and productive. It constitutes a source of independence in any condition of the money market and amid all the mutations of speculative enterprises.

F. J. HAWLEY.

Fiction is supposed to be the nursery of Cupid, so perhaps there is nothing inconsistent in the new departure taken by Ian Maclaren of "Bonnie Brier Bush" fame and George Meredith, who advocate putting limits upon marriage. Although both doctors stand for limit, they evidently disagree in their diagnoses. Meredith would have marriages galore, but limit them to ten years. The other doctor would limit the roll of benefices to men of certified health. Whatever the case might be in England, the Meredith plan is impossible in America. And there are thousands of eligibles for matrimony who could pass a better examination for health after a couple of years in wedlock than in the bachelor stage. Two years' steady life would make robust men out of giddy shallings.

So long as England enjoyed a practical monopoly as a manufacturing nation she paid little or no attention to technical and commercial education, rather protected "the ignorance of her own people," as one of her prominent publicists declared in a recent address in Liverpool. Now she is waking up to the necessity of uniting brains with brawn by providing for the higher education of her workingmen in the arts and trades, as has long been done in France.

The original manuscript of Edgar Allan Poe's "Ulalume," together with the letter to the editor which accompanied it, sold for $1,100. Poe received $2 for the poem which figured in the late deal at $1,000. As a souvenir the letter brought $100. Yet it apparently had no effect in softening the editor's heart at the time it was written.
