DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Barrington Women's Club Entertained at Palatine Last Night.

One of the most enjoyable social events of the season, one which will aid greatly in cementing in a closer union of friendship and neighborly interest many of our people, was held at Palatine last night when the Barrington Women's club closed its work for the summer vacation with a social and luncheon and listened to a most entertaining program arranged by Mrs. G. H. Arps and her accomplished daughter Miss Elnoora.

This pleasant event was participated in by the ladies of the club, their husbands, gentlemen friends and a large number of guests from Barrington, Palatine and Arlington Heights. What served most to make the affair so pleasant and enjoyable was that no semblance of aristocratic bearing or conduct was visible; there was no "select few" to exhibit themselves, but all entered into genuine social intercourse which will be remembered as a most interesting chapter in the history of the club. The event will serve to advance the interests of the organization and attract to its membership; to extend its influence which promises for the highest and best, under the leadership of so well-qualified and popular presiding officer.

The following entertaining program was arranged by Miss Elnoora Arps and

The Symbol of July the Fourth

By LOUIS J. STELLMANN

ONCE, ere a people shook their shoulders free Of an efete, debt-ridden monarchy. And, after strife and famine, stood alone In youthful might to call the land their own— The Day of Independence was unknown.

JULY the fourth! What did it signify In Time's diurnal pageant, passing by The Great Recorder like an endless clan Of dull-garbed pilgrims, treading on to span Forgotten spaces, since the count began?

BUT, lo, a nation rose and crowned the day A sovereign of all the long array! They spelled it "Freedom," and inscribed the name On History's monolith in living flame. Through all the years it has remained the same.

MORE than a century this day has stood For greater liberty and greater good. And, beacon-like, its message flashes forth. Men in the east and west and south and north Have read the meaning of July the Fourth.

THE tyrant trembles on his armored throne. To him it signifies "Thou shalt atone." While to the toilers whom his laws oppress, it proves that courage is its own success. And gives them hope of life and happiness.

SYMBOL of Justice and Equality! It rounds a totem over land and sea To right the errors of a bygone age, Inscribe the Future on a fairer page And give each man his rightful heritage.

The program for our Fourth of July celebration is as follows: Music; ragmuffs; ball game, Grayslake vs. Wauconda, and junior teams. Usual races, games, etc.

BUSINESS SHOWS GOOD INCREASE

Weekly Review of Chicago Trade Indicates Satisfactory Condition.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK FOR CROPS

Interior Merchants Report Weather Influences Tend to Induce Heavy Purchases Over the Counter in Seasonable Merchandise.

Chicago dispatch: The weekly review of trade in the Chicago district, published by the R. G. Dun & Co. mercantile agency, says:

"Business generally made an increasingly satisfactory exhibit. Less hindrance was felt in local arteries, the distribution of leading commodities remained of large volume, and new demands upon producers were well maintained. The iron and steel output exceeded all former tonnage records. Finished woodwork and building material are in strong request, testifying to further activity in construction, and the shipments of staple merchandise reached an increased aggregate. Prices for manufactured products show continued firmness, and supplies, although abundant, are quickly absorbed. These gratifying conditions establish greater confidence in future operations. Other favorable crops are seen in the prospective crop, cheaper money, high failures and prompt collections for both city and country.

Stocks Show Depletion. "Weather influences induced wider dealings in the principal retail branches, and the buying of wearing apparel, footware, household and vacation needs surpassed that of a year ago. This improvement also is found in the interior districts. The result has been a rapid depletion of stocks, and urgent demands upon jobbers for assortments. Forward selections of textiles and other lines of fall and winter goods' now are in evidence, bookings that far running ahead of the average in dry goods, clothing, shoes and furniture."

"Manufacturing moves steadily. Firmness in prices and new commitments obtained furnished a solid basis in the metal, wood and leather departments. No diminution appears in iron and steel production, furnace output in metal, wood and leather departments has gained in rails, structural steel, cars, and heavy machinery.

Railroad Construction is Active. "Additional plans are noted in railroad extensions, bridge and factory building, involving much future consumption of structural material. Lumber receipts, $7,000,000 feet, compare favorably with those of a year ago. Dealers report continued strong demand for both factory and building purposes. Receipts of hides are under the recent high aggregate, 2,047,720 pounds for the corresponding week of 1904. The leather working lines make a large output and good buying characterizes both the retail and wholesale trade.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district were 17, against 30 last week, and 10 a year ago."

Bribe Takers Are Sentenced. Pottsville, Pa., special: Joseph and Pius Bierstein, David Feist, Jacob Noll and George Holvey of Shenandoah were sentenced to serve one year in jail. The men pleaded guilty of accepting bribes.

Visit the Pope. Rome cablegram: The pope received in private audience the Rt. Rev. Edward J. O'Dea, A. D., bishop of Nashville, Tenn., who arrived in Rome on the 14th inst.

Gov. William L. Douglas of Massachusetts is confined to his bed with a cold, which has settled on his lungs. His doctors forbid him considering any engagements in the near future.

RUSSIAN VESSEL UNDER RED FLAG

Warship in Hands of Mutinous Crew Threatens Town of Odessa.

STRIKERS GIVE AID TO SAILORS

Warehouses, Offices and Stores Are Fired, While the Authorities Fear to Call on Troops, Fearing Men Will Join the Rebels.

Odessa, June 29.—The battleship Kniaz Potemkin, with the revolutionary red flag flying, and manned by its crew of mutineers, is holding this city under its guns. One shot was fired Wednesday night at a Cossack patrol, killing five and wounding a score.

The searchlight is sweeping the harbor, shipping and town. The immense quays and buildings thereon, as well as all Russian vessels in the harbor were fired by strikers Wednesday night, who set fire to warehouses, offices and stores.

Mobs of workmen aided by threats of a bombardment from the insurgent flagship prevented the firemen from extinguishing the flames. A huge mob, bellowing revolutionary cries and waving red flags, burst through the troops guarding the town, two customs warehouses which, they looted.

Mob Fires Buildings. Then spreading to all parts of the harbor, they set fire to the warehouses, offices, and shipping. All the foreign ships are preparing to slip their moorings, but the Kniaz Potemkin Tvritchevsk is playing its searchlight in every direction, and it is feared that it will allow any vessel from the harbor to escape.

So far as known no foreign ship is burning, the victims seem to be only those who were not on the streets against whom the strike is directed.

The whole city is alight with the flames. The entire population is waiting and watching for further dread developments.

Authorities Are Helpless. The authorities are completely taken and helpless. Dominated by the threatened bombardment of the town, terrorized by the rapidly increasing mobs of revolutionists, distrustful of the military and afraid of internal dissensions, they are waiting for the arrival of the Black sea fleet, hoping that it has remained loyal.

It is rumored, but the rumor is not true, that a member of one of our battleships mutinied at Sevastopol and that two of the ships are on the way to join the Potemkin.

The crew of the first-class battleship Kniaz Potemkin Tvritchevsk is protesting against the bad quality of the soup, slaughtered all the officers who would not join them, and then set fire to the ships.

Monday night the battleship arrived in the bay from Sevastopol, accompanied by a torpedo boat, both flying the red flag of revolution in violation of the imperial and national standards.

They ignored all signals from shore and when the port authorities sent a launch to the shore, the vessel was driven off by the torpedo boat, which threatened to sink it if the order was not obeyed.

All night the torpedo boat patrolled around the flagship, which lay anchored off the town. When morning came it was some time before the populace realized what had happened, the numerous rumors being ascribed to the malice of the strikers, who throughout Tuesday kept the city in an uproar.

These rumors, however, quickly were shown to be untrue, as the battleship torpedo boat, with its decks cleared for action, ran into the harbor and seized the Russian collier Esperance, with a cargo of 2,000 tons of coal, and took it alongside the battleship.

Avenge Death of Comrade. At the same time an armed pinnace which had been launched by the battleship steamed to the quay, where it landed an open coffin containing the body of a seaman, to whose uniform a written paper had been attached. This paper stated that the man's name was CRUISER RUNS DOWN A LINER. British ship injures Colobenz in Fog Off Coast of Spain. Ferrol, Spain, cable: The British cruiser Carnarvon ran down the North German Lloyd steamer Colobenz in a dense fog at 4 o'clock Sunday morning off the northwest coast of Spain, ten miles from Ferrol. The Colobenz was badly damaged and sprung a leak. Her passengers were transferred to the cruiser, which towed the liner here. The injury to the cruiser was trifling.

name was Omilitchuk, and that he had been shot dead by the chief officer of the battleship for complaining about the bad quality of the soup served the crew. It added that Omilitchuk had been murdered for telling the truth, and that the whole crew had avenged his death by killing the battleship's officers.

As the news spread large crowds, consisting mainly of riotous strikers and their following, flocked to the quay and passed the battleship respectfully saluting the dead.

The police, supported by the Cossacks, tried to disperse the crowd and remove the body, but the crowd surrounded the coffin and defied them to touch it. Some scuffling followed, but before there was a definite result the flagman Potemkin Tvritchevsk hoisted signals that the body was to be on the quay, and that it would be retained on board for burial at sundown with full naval honors.

Rebel Threat is Heeded. If the authorities interfere the insurgents on the battleship declared they would immediately bombard the city.

This threat, emphasized by the sight of the muzzles of the battleship's twelve inch battery leveled at the port, had its effect. The police and troops were called off, and the coffin, surrounded by a sympathizing angry crowd.

Meanwhile the battleship was rapidly coaling from the Esperance. At noon the governor of Odessa ordered all workmen in the harbor to cease. Later he directed all shops and public places to be closed.

Meanwhile he telegraphed to St. Petersburg asking the Russian authorities of the latter place to send the fleet.

Doubt Loyalty of Troops. It is evident the authorities realize their helplessness. An attempt at force undoubtedly would lead to the realization of the mutineers' threat to bombard the city. Moreover, there is reason to believe the authorities suspect the loyalty of the troops, who apart from their mutual sympathy with their comrades in the navy, live under circumstances producing mutiny. They have long been pined by reports with arguments in behalf of a social uprising.

The boldness of the strikers is markedly increased by the presence of the mutineers, who are reckoned as allies. The strikers helped the insurgents by sending men to assist in coaling the battleship. Therefore being posted strong guards around the mutineers' barracks and other public buildings the officials could do little to protect the town or allay the panic which seized a large proportion of the inhabitants.

A crowd of many thousands of orderly residents thronged elevated Nicolski boulevard, whence they could view the harbor and battleship, watching the latter with mingled curiosity and fear.

AGREE TO ARBITRATE ILLINOIS COAL SCALE

Miners and Operators Select Members of Board to Decide Question of Pay for Shot-Firers.

Chicago, June 29.—A basis for arbitration of the dispute between the Illinois Coal Operators' association and the United Mine Workers' organization was reached at the meeting of the joint executive boards Wednesday, thus practically removing all danger of the threatened tie-up on account of the new shot firer law.

By the terms of the agreement reported by the special committee and adopted by the joint executive boards, the United Mine Workers assume the responsibility as heretofore for all work in caring for their rooms and shops, except placing of blasting shots.

After these matters had been disposed of the joint committee agreed to refer the following question to arbitration:

"Under the terms of the existing contracts should or should not the miners reimburse the operators for the amount necessary to pay the wages of the inspectors and shot firers?"

The board of arbitration will consist of H. C. Perry, Springfield, president of the miners' union; W. D. Ryan, Springfield, secretary of the union, who will represent the interests of the operators. Acting for the operators will be A. J. Moorhead, St. Louis, general manager of the Madison Coal company, and H. N. Taylor, Chicago, general manager of the General Williamson Coal company.

The fifth members will be selected. It was stated that the law had no connection with union labor or with the coal industry. He probably will be a man of national reputation.

It will not be known until the board of arbitration is fully constituted and until the wages and conditions of employment have been agreed upon by the joint boards.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Less than a week later, one early afternoon, the members of the household at La Tete des Baux were startled by the booming cannon in the direction of Lake Borgne.

What had happened was this: An English fleet, with twelve hundred men, had, with the intention of throwing an attacking force across Lakes Borgne and Pontchartrain, sailed into Lake Borgne and opened an attack upon the Americans, whose presence was a surprise to the enemy, as Capt. Lockyer, commanding the latter, had understood that this point was defenseless.

A fierce battle followed, resulting in a partial victory for the English, who were now masters of Lake Borgne.

It was the Shapira who, late in the afternoon, brought this news to La Tete des Baux.

The house was soon in a bustle of preparation, the inmates packing hastily the few things they were to take with them in their flight, and concealing such property as would be likely to attract thieving hands among the enemy, who would, with little doubt, visit the plantation, as Shapira reported the woods about Lake Borgne to be filled with British soldiers.

Madame Riefel, when not absorbed by other matters, did not hesitate to express her reluctance toward accepting the assistance of this swartly, grizzled-looking man, whom she had never before seen, and whose very existence had been unknown to her.

"I know something of him," spoke his Mademoiselle Rose. "He is the man of whom grandpere rented Kasannah. Didn't you know it?"

"Yes," Laside added, before Madame Riefel had time to frame a fitting reply, "and we have seen him many times about the woods here. Rose and I once saw Captain Jean talking with him; and I think he is very obliging."

But all this he tells us of a cave,

"Surrender, you cursed pirates!"

where we can hide, right here on the plantation, yet which no one has ever heard of before, and so on, excepting Captain Jean and himself, seems to know anything about, sounds very strange and incredible. Did your grandpere know of this cave, Mademoiselle?"

"I do not know, but I think not. I never heard of such a thing. Yet, madame, it surely is safer to trust this man, who tells us that Captain Jean sent him to stay here and receive a visit from those dreadnaught soldiers."

"We dare not stay, and so we must trust him," said Madame, with a weak attempt at resolution, as she slid a jewel-box into the bundle Violet was preparing to fasten.

Old Zency had come over from Kasannah, having insisted upon being taken away by her beloved young mistress; and now she entered the room to announce that Captain Jean was below stairs.

Never had his arrival at the plantation been so welcome as now. Madame Riefel, catching up her out-of-door wraps from the bed, ordered that the various bundles be brought down stairs; for the phlegmatic Barbe had flashed tying up the last one as Chloe heided Senorita Laside the lace scarf for her head, while Mademoiselle Rose was fastening the long cloak she had fastened that her nursing should wear.

"You may feel yourself fortunate, Madame Riefel, that you are able to leave here by daylight, and as I like some people I know, be roused from sleep to find yourself a prisoner in English hands," said Laside, as they joined him on the stairway.

As they were descending the stairs, he called to Shapira, who was standing on the veranda, and then hurrying down, gave the latter some instructions which the others did not hear as they passed out of the house and faced the slaves, now huddled in a terrified mass, with their faces full of despairing expectancy.

Some of the women began lamenting wildly when they found that they were not to be away. But Laside, in his usual authoritative fashion, quieted the hubbub, and ordered Shapira to take them to the Colonel's camp, as he had now decided that he would use as a hiding-place for those whom he himself had, so unexpectedly, been able to assist.

form that had tempted the new year's eloquent.

Meantime, Baptistine had landed; and leaving his men in the boat, he came leisurely to where Laside was questioning the English sailor. The Baratarians' shrewd eyes had glanced over the scene; and the fallen bodies, the group of cuffed women—all that he saw told him that the perceptions what had presumably taken place, while the sight of his commander, standing unharmed, and Shapira's attitude, as he leaned upon Laside, assured him that the danger, such as it might have been, was past.

Hence his nonchalant, strolling gait to where Laside stood. The latter saw him at once, and interrupted himself to bid Shapira see that the sailor awaited his further orders. Then drawing Baptistine aside, he gave him instructions in regard to placing the ladies and their maids aboard his boat.

"But it seems very dreadful to leave poor Zency lying there," said Rose, while the others looked on. "Laside was assisting her into the small boat."

"It is not possible to do otherwise, child," he answered gently, tightening his arm about the smaller girl, who was holding. "All that can be done for her now, I will see is done before I join you. Will you not trust me to do that?"

The expression of the tear-stained eyes raised to meet his look answered him without the need of speech.

"You are not coming with us?" she asked, when Madame Riefel interrupted with a shrill—"Not coming with us! Oh, Capt. Laside, we cannot go without you. And these strange men! These—now angrily—" "We had put Rose aboard the boat, and turned to assist Laside, while he answered Madame Riefel's outburst calmly, although there was evidence of indignation in his eyes.

"I intend to escort you personally to Shell Island, madame; but it is best that you all go aboard the boat my captain here has waiting around the bend of the bayou, and then return for me, as I have a duty here which I cannot very well perform until you and the other ladies have gone. There may be other Englishmen prowling in the vicinity; and the sound of the firing may bring them in this way. If this should happen, I can manage matters far better advantage by knowing that you are out of harm's way."

Madame made no reply, but permitted him to place her in the boat. Madame Riefel followed her, Violet coming last, and the sailors rushed off as Baptistine sprang aboard.

"Why does not Barbe come with us?" Madame Riefel demanded abruptly, as she saw the French woman walk away. "I wish to speak with you; wait here until the boat returns." She gave no sign of having heard him, but stood silently, until, as Violet was following Bridgita into the boat, she turned and walked over to where lay the dead.

Duly Qualified Kisses.
Some individual with more of time on his hands has conceived the idea of hunting through the works of English novelists for the purpose of finding out all the adjectives used to qualify the word "kiss." The result is as follows:
Cold, warm, icy, burning, chilly, cool, loving, indifferent, balsamic, fragrant, blissful, agonizing, aromatic, with tears bedewed, long, soft, hasty, intoxicating, dissembling, delicious, pious, tender, beguiling, hearty, distracted, frantic, fresh-as-the-morning-dew, divine, starry, with glad, sad, superficial, quiet, loud, fond, heavenly, execrable, devouring, ominous, fervent, parching, nervous, soulless, stupefying, slight, careless, anxious, painful, sweet, refreshing, embarrassed, shy, mute, ravishing, holy, sacred, firm, hurried, faithless, narcotic, feverish, immoderate, stately, brotherly, and paradisaical. The task seemed interminable, and he gave up at this stage.

Australia's Rabbit Plague.
The last spell of best cleared off a multitude of rabbits directly around Broken Hill, and although there are still many about, they are not nearly so plentiful as a few weeks ago. However, since the plague was first introduced, there has been no diminution on the holdings a few miles from Broken Hill. At one well-known station the lessee has been trapping the rabbits at the tank when they come to drink. In this way not fewer than 25,000 rabbits have been exterminated at one tank in a fortnight. A cartload containing 700 rabbits was put in the scales, and weighed one ton.—Melbourne Argus.

Historic Thimbles.
In Mrs. Vanderbil's collection of thimbles, which is the envy of her friends, there are several that are not only very beautiful, but historically valuable as well. Among the latter, and probably most highly valued by their owners, is one which was originally worn by Queen Elizabeth; another, which shows its royal owner knew its use, was the property of Princess Alice; still another dainty conception in metal and enamel, and belonged to the Princess of Wales, while most valued of all is one said to have been used by Queen Victoria when she was a girl.

GAME AND FISH LAW CHANGES

Professional Fishermen and Pot Hunters Are to Be Checked.
New game and fish laws enacted by the last Illinois general assembly go into effect Saturday, July 1. They contain some radical provisions and are the first in the time and manner in which game may be hunted, and the sportsmen who would avoid conflict with the law would do well to study them carefully.

These new laws were enacted in response to a demand for better protection for the game, which is fast being killed off in the Illinois prairie, and to prevent the depopulation of the streams of fish. They are aimed especially at "pot hunters" and professional fishermen, who use other than the ordinary fishing methods and devices in fishing and hunting. The regulations prohibiting what are known as game fish in the streams and quail and prairie chickens are especially severe. During the last ten years there has been a steady decline in the number of quail and prairie chickens in Illinois, and it has been predicted that they would be exterminated if the present methods were allowed to go on for five more years.

The new regulations provide that it shall be unlawful to hunt quail between the 20th day of December and the 10th day of November of each succeeding year. Hunting of quail, prairie chickens and quail is forbidden for four years from the date of the passage of the act. Woodcock and mourning doves are protected absolutely from Dec. 1 and Aug. 1 of each year. Hunting of gray, red, fox or black squirrel is prohibited from Dec. 31 to July 1 of each year; Jack snipe, Wilson's snipe, sand snipe or any kind of snipe or golden plover between May 1 and Sept. 1 of each year.

Killing of wild geese, ducks, brant or the waterfowl prohibited from April 15 until Sept. 1 of each year. It is also made unlawful in all seasons to kill or trap these fowls between the sunset of any day and sunrise of the next day.

Use of swivel guns in shooting ducks and geese as well as shooting them from boats, is prohibited. The use of artificial baits in the killing of geese and ducks are also forbidden beyond the natural cover of reeds that border the water. "Gee" baits, and snipe or any kind of snipe or golden plover between May 1 and Sept. 1 of each year. It is also made unlawful in all seasons to kill or trap these fowls between the sunset of any day and sunrise of the next day.

GIRL RESCUES LITTLE CHILD

Elgin Heroine Nearly Loses Her Life in Protecting 3-year-old Boy.

Finding the gate to the yard fence open Frank, the 3-year-old son of C. Hubert of Elgin toddled forth to see the world. Trains on the Northwest line of the railroad were passing and fascinated him so that he climbed to the tracks and began to play, going about between the rails. As the Lake Geneva express dashed around the curve a child in great joy innocuous of danger, stretched forth its arms to the big engine. The momentum of the train was so great that the engineer was powerless to bring his train to a stop before reaching the child. Margaret Hasendental, a 10-year-old girl seeing the lad's danger rushed from the walk and down to the tracks to where the boy was jerking. Facing almost certain death she grasped the child by its dress and jerked it from its perilous place. A part of the boy's dress was caught under the wheels of the engine. The pilot of the engine struck his rescuer, knocking her unconscious, and when spectators reached the scene the prostrate form of the brave girl lay between the tracks still clinging to the child's dress. The boy was not injured. The girl's left limb was badly bruised and she is now threatened with blood poisoning. People in the neighborhood have started a subscription to purchase a medal for the girl's bravery.

HOLDS VOTING MACHINE LEGAL

Supreme Court Declares for Validity of the Law of 1900.

The supreme court has upheld the validity of the voting machine act of 1900. The decision was given in the case of James Lynch against the voting of the machine in the yard of the county. The only issue was the meaning of the word "ballot." The state constitution says that the voting must be by ballot. The court holds that voting by machine which uses a ball or a slip of paper is legal, provided the right of franchise is protected, the ballot is secret, and is accurately counted. The decision opens the way for the general use of the machine in Illinois.

TRIBUTE TO OUR WOMEN.

Physically and Intellectually They Lead the World, Says Australian.

Helen Jerome, special correspondent of the Age, Melbourne, one of the largest dailies of Australia, accompanied by her three-year-old daughter Carmel, recently reached New York on a mission that will take her practically around the world before it is completed, says the New York American. Her itinerary includes a visit to the interior of Russia to learn the true conditions among the czar's subjects. She also plans a personal interview with the pope.

"The people of Australia and especially the women, who now enjoy equal suffrage with the men, are greatly interested in the American women," she writes. "Many conflicting stories are written about the American women—some of them are grotesque caricatures—and so my paper sent me here to study them and tell of their life and advancement, political and otherwise."

"I have written back that the American women are intellectually and physically the finest women of the world and slightly in advance of their sisters in Australia, who are easily the leading nations of the world. I am delighted with the results of my visit and have slowly traveled across the continent in order to study the women of different sections."

Mrs. Jerome visited Japan a year ago and is the author of "Japan of Today."

Log Hut at Valley Forge.

The Daughters of the American Revolution of Pennsylvania recently began without ceremony the erection of a log hut at Valley Forge on the site of one of the original huts built and occupied by Washington's army and not far from the home of Senator Knox, says a special dispatch from Norristown, Pa., to the Public Ledger.

The timber, some of which has been cut, will all be taken from the historic ground, much of it coming from the land donated by H. Heston Todd of Port Kennedy to the promoters of the Washington Memorial chapel, from which it is not far distant. This hut will be built after the manner of those constructed by the New Jersey soldiers and not reared without a foundation, as were the huts of those soldiers from North Carolina, where the suffering was the greatest from exposure.

Concise Lecture on Panama Canal.

A good example of conciseness in a lecture is the discourse on the Panama canal delivered recently in a Vermont town, says the Boston Record. The lecturer was a drummer, and he had been holding forth at the hotel on Panama and the tropics to such an extent that the managers of a church festival hit on the brilliant idea of asking him to tell the church folk about the canal. The drummer accepted—he could not help it—and this is his lecture on the Panama canal.

"As I came into this church I noticed a ditch in the street, evidently for water pipes or something. Just imagine that ditch 200 times as wide, 200 times as deep and forty-seven miles long. And there you are. Good night."

Novelty in Laces.

Electroplated laces are among the latest French novelties, says the New York Post. The laces are made conductors of an electric current and placed in a galvanic bath. Under the influence of a current of about three volts they become coated with an exceedingly delicate metal surface, the colors of which and other properties can be regulated at libitum. The coat-

THE MECKLEN-ERG DECLARATION [Continued from Page 5.] been developing into a freedom loving and despot hating colony. At an early day an elaborate scheme of government had been formulated by the philosopher John Locke. It provided for three orders of nobility and four houses of parliament. It was altogether too comprehensive for the Carolina planters, and they declined to accept it. Not to quibble, the population was sturdy and self reliant, independent folk with ideas of their own and strong wills to back them.

Many of the royal governors found it no easy task to keep these free spoken pioneers to their allegiance. Many of them came into direct conflict with the inhabitants. The first provincial congress of North Carolina met in 1774 and sent delegates to the Continental congress. The state was invaded by the British. The Old North State was decidedly averse to leaving the Union at the outbreak of the civil war and opposed no coalition at a matter of expediency. When her position seemed no longer to be tenable, she reconsidered and passed the separating ordinance. Once committed, she threw herself into the cause with all the energy she could command. She furnished over 120,000 soldiers to the Confederacy, more than twice her proportion. She also lost more men than any other southern state, and during the last year of the war practically fed General Lee's army. There ought not to be a patriotic soul in all America so ungenerous and so ungrateful of the past as to refuse to join with this dignified old commonwealth in the veneration which she maintains for those intrepid militiamen who went boldly into Charlotte—no matter how, less matter how—and declared themselves absolved forever from further allegiance to the foreign oppressor. Peace be to their spirits!

The Birthdays of Liberty
July 4, 1776
... By ...
AUGUSTUS W. FERRIN

A PLAIN brick building of antique aspect, one of the most notable buildings in America, is not in all the world, is the old statehouse in Philadelphia. Within its walls are written the nation's most glowing pages. The beginning of American Independence, its unpretentious spirit has pointed the way to freedom to two hemispheres, to regions undreamed of when its cornerstone was laid. Here was signed that declaration of the rights of man which marked the beginning of the greatest epoch in the world's development. From its tower the Liberty bell, tolling the knell of despotism, rang out to the ears of a new government among the nations. Here George Washington was commissioned to lead his undisciplined troops to victory. Here the Continental congress met and deliberated, "a company of gentlemen." Here was framed the constitution on which the republic has rested as upon a rock for more than a hundred years. As long as the hand of man can see the destructive forces of nature, this temple of liberty will be preserved, a source of inspiration not only to those who claim it as their direct inheritance, but to the inhabitants of the entire land. From its altar went forth the brand which lighted the torch of freedom for France, and it may yet be as deeply revered upon the banks of the Nile.

Independence hall, for the name of the chamber in which the Declaration was signed is now applied to the whole structure, was begun in 1772, the year in which George Washington was born as a statesman for the colony of Pennsylvania. John Kearsley was its architect. E. Woolley its builder. As originally constructed it was without the southern projection which forms the base of the present tower. When it was nearing completion the east room, later known as Independence hall, was used by the colonial assembly at its session in October, 1775, over which Andrew Hamilton presided. The west room was first used by the supreme court in 1743. In 1733 it was ordered that two additional buildings for the reception of the records and papers of the province be erected, forming wings on each side of the main structure. In 1759 the assembly authorized an addition on the south side of the main building for a staircase and for a suitable place in which to hang a bell. A wooden tower was added, and in this the Liberty bell was housed.

This bell, forever to be famous, was cast in England especially for the statehouse by Thomas Lester of Whitechapel, London. It was twelve feet in circumference around the lip and seven feet six inches around the crown weighing approximately a ton. It was brought to this country in 1752. In being taken from the ship it met with a mishap and was repaired in Philadelphia by Pass & Stow, with these words inscribed upon it: "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." On Sept. 17, 1776, it first called the assembly of Pennsylvania together. On Oct. 5, 1776, it tolled the arrival of the Royal Charlotte bearing the stamps for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware. The assembly, thus summoned, met and demanded that the stamps be returned to England. On Nov. 1, 1776, it was again tolled when the stamp tax was put in operation.

On July 30, 1776, it called a meeting at which it was decided that "the parliament of Great Britain has reduced the people to the level of the beasts." On June 1, 1774, it tolled the closing of the port of Boston. April 24, 1775, after the battle of Lexington, the bell summoned 8,000 citizens to the statehouse square, who pledged themselves to the cause of liberty. On July 4, 1776, it announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Andrew McNair was the man who rang it on that memorable day. On Sept. 26 of the same year the bell called the national convention to Philadelphia to meet for the last time. On Sept. 3, 1783, it announced the proclamation of peace. From then until 1845 every event in the history of the United States was made known to the citizens of Philadelphia by the silvery tones of the Liberty bell. July 8, 1835, fifty-nine years after the proclamation of the "immortal declaration," it tolled for the last time during the funeral of Chief Justice Marshall. Suddenly and without any apparent reason it cracked while tolling the passing of the great jurist. That crack has since been its permanent mark. The last man to ring the old bell was Thomas Downing.

The Liberty bell has many times left its home. First, when Philadelphia was taken by the British and the statehouse was used as a hospital and morgue for English soldiers. Then the bell was carried to Allentown, Pa., guarded by North Carolina Virginia troops. It was returned to Philadelphia in 1778. Its later journeys have been more auspicious. In 1885 it was taken, under a guard of honor, to New Orleans for the world's exposi-trial and cotton exposition, greeted everywhere along its route by cheering thousands. In 1893 it went to Chicago, 1895 to Atlanta, in 1902 to Charleston and last year to St. Louis. It now rests in a sacred room of independence hall, and though its presence at the Jamestown exposition has been questioned it is likely never to be disturbed again.

The old statehouse is now used as a historical museum and is full of relics of Revolutionary days. Recently it was restored as nearly as possible to its condition in 1776. Little change was needed in the room in which the founders of the Union affixed their signature and drew the constitution of 1787, where Franklin harmonized the quarrel between the advocates of centralization and state rights and where John Adams presided over the first United States senate. The floors were relaid and the ornamentation restored according to the picture of "The Signing" painted by Jonathan Trumbull. The chandelier which hangs in this room is the original, imported from France in 1785. More extensive alterations were made elsewhere in the building, the result of years of study and labor on the part of those who carried out the project. The arms of Great Britain, which adorned the walls of the supreme court room and which were taken down and burned in 1776, were not replaced, but the chairs of the chief justices and his associates occupy their original positions.

Looking from Chestnut street upon the exterior walls of the building one is surprised to see them so well preserved. They are as upright and unscathed as the days when the fathers met within them. With proper care they will surely stand, the objects of patriotic pride and veneration, at the second centennial of American independence.

Respective Celebrating.

In some of the elaborate displays at large cities past New York and other large cities past, the flags and bunting are turned into sparks, flame and smoke at the rate of $5,000 an hour, more than the highest priced opera singer in the world receives for her services. The rocket which whizzes into the air and breaks into a stream of pendants or is turned into a shower of sparks and "Obs" and "Aha" of the spectators is still used, but it has been wonderfully changed in recent years. It still whizzes upward, leaving a trail of sparks behind, but at the end of the journey may burst into a golden shower resembling some familiar flower. Perhaps from the center falls a rain of red, white and blue balls, floating gracefully downward until they almost touch the earth. Others form a cluster of long delicate lines somewhat similar to a raincoat on a summer day, and thus they are named. The rate of some downward, however, at a rate of from $15 to $50 a fall—much more costly than the natural shower. Assorted fireworks for family celebration may be secured for from $2 to $5 and a car load of set pieces often costs at least $10,000.

Let the Eagle Scream.

The national holiday, dear to the heart of every American citizen, will be celebrated in Barrington this year in a manner befitting the occasion. Committees in charge of the program are working like Trojans on the details, and the fun will be fast and furious. There will be all manner of sports and games for which prizes will be arranged; dancing at noon during afternoon and evening for those who wish; a repetition of the water contest which proved a great attraction last 4th; the big Barrington band will furnish music; oratory will rip the empyrean and calumny plans will be ventilated.

Everybody come to Barrington on July Fourth.

The Mecklenburg Declaration

HERE is at least one spot in the American Union which does not yield an undivided allegiance to the great national holiday. Its citizens may, and doubtless do, manifest a great enthusiasm and expend as much money for visual patriotism on that day of days as others, but in their swelling hearts there is a tender reservation. The immortal Declaration of 1776 is addressed to them, but there is a deeper, for they are the citizens of Charlotte, N. C., the scene of the adoption of the Mecklenburg declaration of independence. According to the historians—most of whom are particular to disavow all personal knowledge of the matter—a convention made up of delegates from every county of militia in Mecklenburg county, N. C., met at Charlotte, the county town, on May 20, 1775, more than a year before the promulgation of the immortal document at Philadelphia, and adopted a declaration of independence.

The origin of this early declaration is enveloped in a good deal of obscurity. There has even been a protracted controversy over the date of the convention. This fact has given rise in the minds of many persons to the impression that two conventions may have been held. The difficulty of fixing the date has also led to the conviction in the minds of others that the declaration is a patriotic myth. This skepticism, however, does not prevail in North Carolina, which has declared its faith in the matter by appointing May 20 a legal holiday. That firm stand, of course, should settle the business, but alas for the frailty of man, there are still doubters.

The copy of the resolutions made by the secretary of the Charlotte meeting are reputed to have been destroyed by fire. On April 30, 1839, what purported to be a copy of the original document, made probably from recollection, was published in the Raleigh Register. Some of the phraseology of the composition was so reminiscent of the language of the Fourth of July declaration that the authenticity of the Mecklenburg resolutions became a matter of serious doubt. At the present time the weight of historical opinion seems to be against the validity of the resolutions as printed in the Raleigh Register and accepted by the fabricators of North Carolina. In the face of its hesitation on the part of the historians the Liberty League of Mecklenburg State has borne substantial witness to their faith in the existing declaration and its framers by erecting in front of their beautiful new courthouse at Charlotte a noble memorial shaft to the memory of the fearless militiamen who, according to the belief of their descendants, assembled there on that fateful ninth century May morning and declared:

First.—Whoever aids or abets the invasion of American rights is an enemy of the country and to the inalienable and inherent rights of man.

Second.—That all political ties between the citizens of Mecklenburg county and the British crown are dissolved.

Third.—That we do hereby declare ourselves a free and independent people under the control of no other power than that of our own and the general government of the congress to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual cooperation, our lives, our fortunes and our most sacred honor.

Fourth.—That we acknowledge the existence of no law or public officer, but renounce the former laws in so far as they do not recognize the authority of the crown, thus vacating all civil and military commissions granted by the crown.

Fifth.—That all military officers of the county are retained in their former commands and that every member of the convention is heretofore a civil officer and shall preserve, maintain and determine all matters of controversy, preserve peace and harmony and endeavor to spread the love of country until a more generally organized government be maintained in the province.

Although the precise words of this much disputed document may never be known, and even though a formal declaration was never made, nothing can detract from the patriotic attitude assumed by the Old North State during the period antecedent to the breaking out of the Revolution and the part taken by her that never to be forgotten struggle. For nearly 200 years before the severance of the ties which bound her to the mother country Carolina had the crown.

SENT OUT THE DECLARATION

New Copies of Immortal Document Were Distributed.

It is on record that the congress sitting in Philadelphia in 1776 adopted the following resolution on the 4th of July: "Resolved, That copies of the Declaration be sent to the several assemblies, conventions and councils of safety, and to the several commanding officers of continental army corps, that it be proclaimed in each of the United States and at the head of the army."

In accordance with this resolution, John Hancock, president of the congress, enclosed a copy of the Declaration to which of the states and to the various organizations named in the resolution. With the enclosed resolution, the following letter: "I do myself the honor to enclose, in obedience to the commands of congress, a copy of the Declaration of Independence, which you will please to have proclaimed in your colony in such a way and manner as you shall judge best. The important consequences resulting to the American states from this Declaration of Independence, considered as the ground and foundation of a future government, will naturally suggest the propriety of proclaiming it in such a mode that the people may be benefited by it."

It was on the sixth day of July when President Hancock sent the following very dignified communication to Gen. George Washington: "The congress have adopted it necessary to describe the connection between Great Britain and the American colonies, and to declare them free and independent states, as you will perceive by the enclosed Declaration, which I am directed to transmit to you, and to request you will have it proclaimed at the head of the army in the way you shall think most proper."

An Oidtime Toast.
The following toast, given by the merchants of New York in 1795 at the Tontine coffee house, is a sample of many which the day always carries forth:

"The auspicious day that rescued our country from the hated yoke of foreign tyranny, and gave us honorable rank among the nations of the earth—May its glorious events never be effaced from our memories; may the blessings it has conferred be as lasting as the globe we inhabit, and may each revolving year find us more united, more happy, and more free."

The First Patriots.
The men of the long ago days of 1776, who had nothing so much at heart as the welfare of the "Old Thirteen" and the states certain to be added to them in coming years, were men whose acts and motives the present and future generations may study with profit. Our country has never had nor is it likely to ever have a nobler band of men than those whose names were signed to the Declaration of Independence on the Fourth of July in the year 1776.

CLASS BARRIERS GO DOWN.

Effect of British Aristocracy Engaging in Trade.

The tendency of the British aristocracy to engage in trade may have a wholesome effect upon the nobility. It will break down in time the absurd barrier which has prevented social intercourse between the shopkeeper and the man with a title. In politics this has already been done. The people of Great Britain are now governed, it has been said, by a committee of the house of commons. The prime minister of Great Britain, Mr. Balfour, is of aristocratic descent, being a nephew of the late Lord Salisbury. He is a brilliant, many-sided man. But the statesman, who probably has the strongest hold upon the British people is Joseph Chamberlain, formerly secretary of state for the colonies, who is a descendant of the "middle class" and is himself a manufacturer and tradesman. Mr. Chamberlain has more brains than most of the British nobility combined, but under a rigid interpretation of the social canons in England he might not be admissible to the "best society" in Britain. With the nobility going into trade, however, there will soon be an end of this nonsensical exclusiveness.—Baltimore Sun.

STRAIN OF NEW YORK LIFE.

Manner of Living Worse Than Hardest Work, Says Edison.

Edison despises New York City. "I loathe its artificial way of living," he says, "its mannerisms, its ways of thought. It has but the one redeeming feature, that it is getting so impossible that people must leave it or become crazed. A man in New York gets down to his office at 9, works until 11, or 12, goes out, takes a couple of cocktails, eats a hearty luncheon, hurriedly goes back to his desk and works until 6, or 6, hurries up town, stopping off for one or two more drinks, goes out somewhere, eats an enormous dinner, comes to the theater and then supper, and finally tumbles into bed. It is that type of man who often says to me, 'I don't see how you stand the strain of working the way you do day after day and night after night in the laboratory.' Work's whys, my work is play compared with his."

Gen. Boynton and Chickamauga.
"Not exactly ferocious," said a leading citizen of Chattanooga, Tenn., are agitating a movement to erect a memorial to Gen. H. V. Boynton, late dean of Washington correspondents and head of the Chattanooga and Chickamauga national park commission. He is recognized as the originator of the idea and it was he who drew up the bill for the creation of the park commission and pressed its passage through congress. The idea has also been urged that Gen. Boynton should be buried on Missionary Ridge, where he was wounded. "That he was Chattanooga's best friend was a common remark when the news of his death was received there."

Rulers Move to Stand It.
While King Alfonso of Spain was visiting Paris he asked M. Doumer, president of the chamber, if he had to be severe in the exercise of his authority. "Not exactly ferocious," said M. Doumer. "Since I have been president I have had to apply the censure only twice." "And for what reason?" asked the king. "Because I had demoted a minister who had spoken ill of the republic." "Oh," said Alfonso, with a smile, "if I applied the censure to all who speak ill of me I should have nothing else to do." Upon this M. Doumer hitting his hands together, exclaimed, "And what about me?"

ADDS TO SPLENDOR

MEN OF BUSINESS RECOGNIZE ADVANTAGES OF ACETYLENE.

Famous Summer Hotel, the Grand Union of Saratoga, Has Installed This Best of All Artificial Lights—Means Increased Comfort and Health.

Saratoga, June 27.—The very name, "Saratoga," brings to every mind health-giving springs, unsurpassed hotels and beautiful drives. It has been for many years the Mecca for all who admire nature, enjoy good living, and are searching for health, or are simply taking a vacation.

The Grand Union, the largest summer hotel in the United States, set among green trees with iron wings enclosing a court, contains an art gallery, flowers, grass and trees, music and light, is throughout the season thronged with guests. With the progressive spirit always shown by its management, the Grand Union has again introduced acetylene gas to make still more brilliant the evening hours. The general properties of acetylene furnishing their guests with the best of everything, and now, after investigating and finding that Artificial Sunlight can be had, they have installed a complete acetylene gas plant to produce it, and have connected upwards of six thousand acetylene burners in and about the house and grounds to this little gas plant.

Like many discoveries of recent years, which are coming into popular favor, acetylene, one of the most recent, is very simple to use. It is adapted for wherever artificial light is needed and the necessary apparatus can be understood and operated by anyone.

The generator in which Acetylene is produced by the automatic contact of carbide and water might be termed a gas plant, as it performs all the functions of a factory. The acetylene generator can be purchased for a few dollars and in any size, from one adapted to furnish acetylene to ten or a dozen burners for a cottage, up to the large but still simple machine such as is now furnishing Acetylene for six thousand burners in the Grand Union.

Outlets of large cities the use of Acetylene is quite common. The owner of the country home now demands running water, gas and other conveniences which a few years ago were considered luxuries. Acetylene gas has met his requirements, and gives him a better and cheaper light than is ordinarily furnished in cities.

It will mean that rooms lighted with Acetylene are more comfortable, because cooler, and more healthful because the air is not vitiated.

ELEPHANT HAD KIND HEART.

But Nature Never Meant Her to Mother Younglings.
Bishop W. N. McVickar of Rhode Island is a man of Titanic mold. Yet his every thought is kindly. When he steps it is with great care lest he crush a daisy under his weight. He will not walk on a carpet of flowers. He has a master at telling animal stories. Here is one:
"There was once a kindly female elephant, strolling through a wheat field. She happened to wander so sorely I don't know, but in her wanderings she stepped on a female partridge. With deep grief the elephant saw what she had done and lifted up the poor creature, and the ridges running about looking for their mother.
"Poor little orphans," said the compassionate beast. "I have made them orphaned." Then she gathered them all together with her trunk and having observed how mother partridges hover over their young, she carefully laid down upon the breast the noble and shelled them for the night. All of which goes to prove that a woman is not necessary at the head of an orphan asylum."—New York Times.

Pierre Loti Admires Turka.
As Pierre Loti, the academician, is known as a great lover of cats, there was nothing surprising in his opening his eyes to the Turkish cat he desired to make a speech, though, saying: "Let's imitate our friend the cat. He's a silent creature." It is more surprising, however, that he should be complimenting the Turk and objecting to the epithet "unspeakable." In reference to him the academician has sent a message on the occasion of the appearance of the number of Le Figaro, a paper published in Salon. He supports the paper's aim, which is to make the Turks known in Europe, and says: "The Turkish people are brave, gentle, sober and admirable dreamers, thoroughly loyal, magnificent in war and one of the noblest on earth."

Accompanies Peary's Expedition.
Miss Mamie Babb of Westbrook, Me., who sails with Commander and Mrs. Peary in the Roosevelt when the explorer makes his quest for the north pole, is perhaps the youngest woman who has ever undertaken such an expedition. She is 20 years old. It is not through the spirit of adventure that she takes this trip, but because she has been offered a large salary to go as stenographer to the commander and companion to Mrs. Peary. Physically she is a little girl and does not look like a stout great hardship. She is now staying at Eagle Lodge, an isolated inn in Casco bay, the Peary summer home.

Chichory.
The chichory plant is now grown widely in this country, though it came from Europe. It belongs to the same kind of plants as the prickly lettuce and dandelion. It grows best in the cooler portions of the country. Any

Chichory plant (not to be confused with the root, which is harvested before frost.)

The valuable part of the plant is the root, which is harvested before frost. The root is dug the top is cut off and the rest sent to the factory. In France the tops are fed to cattle.

Frosted roots are worthless and there fore care is necessary to get them last a place of refuge before frost comes. When the root is dug the top is cut off and the rest sent to the factory. In France the tops are fed to cattle.

When the roots are dug and have to remain in the field for some hours the tops are thrown over them to protect them from the sun. Chichory is used extensively in the adulteration of coffee.

Dew on the Hay.
Before long hay making will be with us, and we will have to consider the various problems connected with the harvesting of the grass crop in the form of hay. Keep the dew off the grass when it is being put into shape for hay. It is a mistake to begin to mow too early in the morning, especially when the night has been quiet and a great deal of dew has fallen. When the wind blows little dew collects on the grass, and if the sun is hot the mowers may begin to mow much earlier than they otherwise would. Clover hay should be mowed up into cocks before the evening dew begins to fall.

Farm Fences.
Farm fences are always matters of expense and no more of them should be retained on the farm than is necessary. In case of a permanent pasture, but only the seed to be fenced. The shape of the pasture counts for a good deal in the use of fencing. The form of pasture that will use least fencing to a certain area is the square. Every deviation from this means an increase in the length of the fence.

Farmers' Wives should receive treatment of Acetylene Apparatus Mfg. Co. in another column of this paper.

WHY THEY ARE HAPPY

TWO NOTABLE RECOVERIES FROM EXTREME DEBILITY.

Mr. Goldstein's Strength Had Been Washing the "Three Yewes" from his System.

"My strength had dwindled so that I couldn't apply myself to my business with any snap but was tired and listless all the time," said Mr. Goldstein. "I went to bed completely used up by my day's work, and when I got up in the morning I didn't feel rested a bit. I had awful headaches, too, and my kidneys got out of order and caused me to have severe pains in the back. At one time I became so feeble that I could not stir from bed for three weeks."

Mr. Goldstein is a young man and had then but recently established a home of his own. His anxieties were increased by the fact that his wife was far from being robust. Mr. Goldstein says: "For two years I had been ill most of the time. Sometimes I was confined to bed for weeks in succession under a physician's treatment. I had rheumatism, kidney trouble, pain about the heart and many more uncomfortable symptoms connected with that weakness to which my sex is peculiarly subject."

"Trouble had invaded this household and settled in it in just the years that ought to be the very happiest. Physicians could not tell them how to get rid of it. 'I will never be cured,' said Mr. Goldstein. 'Then the urgency of some friends led me to try a blood and nerve remedy which was said to be wonderful success. Within a month there were unmistakable signs of improvement in my condition, and within a year I was completely well. Through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I have now as good a blood as ever had in my life.'"

Mrs. Goldstein writes: "The wonderful effect that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had in the case of my husband led me to try to get some relief for my own troubles. Within a month there were unmistakable signs of improvement in my condition, and within a year I was completely well. Through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best tonic and regulator they make pure, rich blood and when there is general weakness and disorder that is what the system needs. Mr. and Mrs. H. Goldstein are now of West Boston, Mass. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by druggists everywhere."

Foolish Customs Law.
Several times of late have been found among the luggage of an Englishman who was traveling to Morocco last month. He had a charge of a racing craft, and intended to use the pigment to touch up the vessel after its long railway journey. The French customs officials, however, took exception to the paint, on the ground that it contained dutiable spirit, whereupon the traveler argued that he intended, bringing it back on leaving the country, to use it for his own pleasure. "Bring it back," he replied. "On the side of the boat." Even this plea did not suffice, the authorities arguing that the spirit would have evaporated.

Every housekeeper should know that if they will buy Defiance Cold Water Starch for laundry use they will save a great deal of time, because it never sticks to the iron, but because each package contains 16 oz.—one full pound—while all other Cold Water Starches put up in 8-ounce packages and the price is the same, 10 cents. Then again because Defiance Starch is free from all injurious chemicals. If your grocer tries to sell you a good package it is because he has a stock on hand which he wishes to dispose of before he puts in Defiance. He knows that Defiance Starch has printed on every package in large letters and figures "16 oz." Demand Defiance and save much time and money and the annoyance of the iron sticking. Defiance never sticks.

Howell's Highly-Congratulated.
The most conspicuous of this year's academic decorations are the LL. D. conferred by Princeton on George Britton McCallan, mayor of New York, who is scholar and writer as well as man of affairs, and Columbia's Litt. D. for William Dean Howells. In congratulating Howells' name Prof. Peck spoke of him as having, through "action as true as truth itself," become "the interpreter of his own countrymen to themselves."

Old "Sweethearts" United.
Angela R. Kilburn and John F. Johnson of Winsted, Conn., were schoolmates in the defunct Sweethearts fifty years ago. They quarreled and separated and each married another. Death broke in upon their domestic lives; one became a widow, the other a widower. "Sweethearts" they met "made up" the old quarrel and married.

Here is Relief for Women.

He Did.
"Gobbleton has disgusting habit of answering a question by asking another. Ever notice it?"
"Why, no; not particularly. Let's try him—how he comes." Ok, Gobbleton, you find me?"
"Take me for an easy mark?"

Farmers' Wives should receive treatment of Acetylene Apparatus Mfg. Co. in another column of this paper.
The Georgia legislature is soon to assemble in Atlanta, and the watermelon season will open there about the same time. Fortunate is Atlanta.

of the charming day, the pleasant surroundings, every one seemed to enjoy the outing. The baskets of goodies were opened, and the dinner more than appreciated. After lunch the various sights of the park were visited and at early sunset a return home.

Miss Luella Hager entertained the Epworth League of the Methodist church, in her home last Tuesday evening. After a most enjoyable evening ice cream and cake were served, after which the young people adjourned for their hayrack ride to Barrington.

Primary for the election of delegates to the Cook county democratic convention, which named a judicial ticket and trustees for the auxiliary board, was held in Barrington township Tuesday. The vote was very light. M. C. McIntosh was named as delegate and L. Krahn as alternate.

Rev. E. W. McNaull will begin his service with the Baptist church next Sunday morning. He will have services both morning and evening appropriate for the Sunday preceding Independence day. In the morning the subject will be "Law and Liberty." Strangers are cordially invited to all the services of the church.

The railway company put in an extra switch and trestle at the plant of the Fischer Iron and Steel company, Chicago Highlands, Wednesday. Painters will soon be at work repainting the wood work of the buildings, and putting in extra pumps, piping, etc. Large bodies move slow, but inside of a large day's activity will be noticeable at the plant.

Husbands of members of the Barrington Woman's Club are all puffed up and just because the president of that organization (in a very pretty little after dinner speech at Palatine last night) referred to them as "most indigent; patient, intelligent, handsome and well groomed to be found." Mrs. McIntosh is certainly an able authority and her opinion a compliment.

The Sunshine and Faithful Sunday school class of the Methodist church was entertained Tuesday afternoon by Miss Edna Hollister on the lawn at the Hollister farm north of town. The monthly business meeting was a joyful afternoon, passed in playing games, enjoying graphophone music and a lunch served on the lawn. The children were driven out and back on a hayrack.

The reporter enjoyed an hour most delightfully Tuesday in conversation with Charles Davlin at his hospitable home near Wauconda. Mr. Davlin is one of the highly esteemed citizens of Cuba township; one who keeps closely in touch with all topics of public interest; one whom 'tis a pleasure to meet. His health does not allow him to engage in active work or does he get away from home often. But any human should be happy to pass the declining years amid as pleasant surroundings as are found at the Davlin home.

Lake County Fair.

Directors of the Lake County Fair Agricultural society at Libertyville lately, and definite arrangements were made for the construction of new and the repairing of old buildings on the county fair grounds.
Among the improvements the grand stand is to be remodeled and extended 50 feet, and a new barn 34 by 90 feet is to be erected. The fair will open in September.

Secretary Morse is already receiving inquiries of horsemen to whom the prizes to be hung on this year's appeal and a speed program to be a record breaker is promised.

Make it a Good One.

Barrington has announced to the outside world that the national birthday will be properly celebrated within its limits. Therefore every citizen will take an active interest in the celebration, and make it a good one. The program arranged by the several committees, is one which should attract a large crowd. It offers entertainment from sunrise until late at night.

Liberal purses and prizes are offered for all contests. The races and the water contest will prove exciting, and there will be many entries. The evening will bring a grand display of beautiful fireworks, and concerts by the big Barrington cornet band and Ladies' Concert band.

Come to Barrington. Come early and stay late. The day will be replete with fun, and you should not miss any of it.

Hear the orators; see the parade; witness the sports.

Thursday Club Election.

The Thursday club has elected officers for the ensuing term as follows: President—Mrs. Wm. Howarth, Vice Pres.—Mrs. Geo. W. Spammer, Secretary—Mrs. P. Fackelman, Treasurer—Mrs. S. Seebert, Organist—Mrs. Frank Hawley. The club held its annual outing at Lord's park, Elgin, yesterday.

A Family Gathering.

A jolly good time was had all last week at the home of Mrs. Church, on Grand avenue, she having with her her three sons and two daughters, and many nieces, nephews, grand nieces, and nephews, besides many friends.

All of her children except two—Mrs. J. Davis of Hebron, Neb., and George M. Church of Kassas—were with her. Her visitors represented ten families, from five different states. Mrs. Church is one of our old ladies, and we hope she may live to enjoy many more such pleasant family gatherings.

That Pest on Palates.

State Entomologist Forbes in speaking of the pest on the maple trees says: "The pest is known as the cottony maple scale not fully developed. This scale is abundant enough to be injurious for not more than one or two years in succession, its parasitic and predaceous enemies getting the advantage of it within this time, so that it is practically exterminated. A lady-bug larva, which devours the cottony egg masses—in the midst of which it lives and grows—is perhaps the most efficient of these. It can, consequently, ordinarily be left to itself. If, however, you wish to treat the trees infested, the best thing that can be done will be to spray them with kerosene emulsion, diluted to contain about ten per cent of kerosene, after the eggs have hatched, and before the young insects have become thoroughly protected by the waxy scale which they secrete."

The Best Test.

Do you ever hear of people coming from Dundee to trade in your town? Why don't they? Do you ever hear of people going from your town to trade in Dundee? Why do they? Think it over.

VICINITY NEWS

Clipped from Exchanges and Told by Correspondents.

The sum of $24,806,965 represents the value of all property in Elgin township for 1905 as reported by Assessor Yarwood—an increase of $1,342,605 over the figures of one year ago.

Mrs. Sadie Randall, of Elgin, has entered suit for $5,000 in the circuit court against James Morrison, Douglass avenue saloonkeeper, and the Metzberg estate jointly, on the charge that the former sold liquor to her husband, until he could not support his family. Attorney Kramer represents her.

At last general election the vote of Antioch township numbered 450, and as the law requires that when a township has acquired that amount it shall be divided into two precincts, therefore at the last meeting of the Board of Supervisors a motion was made and carried that Antioch township be divided on the road running north and south, and that both voting precincts be in the village of Antioch.

A Chicago lady wrote to a farmer over in Michigan where she spent last summer with her family and told him she would like to come again this summer, but that she objected to the kitchen methods of his hired girl and to the swine being kept so close to the house. She received an answer which contained the following: "You may cum all right. Hannah has went and there haint been no hogs on the place since you left last summer."

No Secret About It.

It is no secret that for cuts, burns, ulcers, fever sores, sore eyes, boils, etc., nothing is so effective as Bucklin's Arnica salve. "It didn't take long to cure a bad sore I had, and it is all O.K. for sore eyes," writes D. L. Gregory, of Hope, Tex. 25c, at the Barrington Pharmacy.

It Takes Time.

Give the printer a chance if you want a well-displayed advertisement. When a certain large amount of composition must be done in a fixed and limited time, things have to be done in the quickest possible way. One should not expect to get the best results under such circumstances. There is scarcely an advertisement printed in a daily paper that could not be improved typographically, and the printer could and would improve it if he had time. There is a legend current among the members of the craft of one single page advertisement in a magazine on which one compositor worked for about three months before he got it the way it finally appeared. Both advertisers and compositors may well ponder this story for the moral it contains.

Thompson & Reid ice cream (none better made), with pure fruit juices, only five cents, at the Barrington Pharmacy.

New Primary Law.

The first primaries to be held under the new law will take place next March, when the town and city primaries must be held on the same date. In April the county primaries will be held, and this will be the last county primary for two years. All parties vote on the same day at the same places of election which are the general election places, run by the general election judges and clerks at the expense of the county. As the voter steps up to vote he must declare his party affiliation and is then given a ticket of that party.

Candidates can run by petition, but must have their petition filed before the day of the primary, and no voter signing the petition of an independent can afterwards vote for a candidate in the regular primary. In other words the signer is shut out.

Delegates must follow instructions, and if they fail to do so, the secretary is empowered to cast the vote as the voters instructed. The county committee decides whether a candidate make a majority or plurality to nominate. The above features are among the many new points of interest incorporated in the new law.

Huge Task.

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone I could not sit on a chair without a cushion, and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure, and by their use was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver, or stomach. Guaranteed by the Barrington Pharmacy."
