Appleton physicians have declared war on carp, the foulest thing in the fish family, and declare that, inasmuch as they feed on sewage and refuse, they are responsible for the spread of typhoid fever. It has been definitely ascertained that many of the fever victims in that city had been in the habit of eating carp, which are very abundant in the lakes around Appleton and are crowding out the more desirable fish. It may be that there is something in the theory, but for our part we fail to understand how the typhoid fever, or any other disease, could affect a person who had a stomach strong enough to tackle carp.

 The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were irked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed, at Barrington Pharmacy. Price 50 cents.

Little Stories
 TOLD BY MACKNEY
 Oh, the happy, happy farmer doesn't have to pay a cent
 To a landlord who is heartless when he comes to claim his rent
 He doesn't have to hurry out to catch the train, and then
 Work as common all the day slave of other men.
 And he doesn't when he's weary from the duties of the day,
 Hurry to the Wells street station, dodging footpads on the way.

I have noticed that the women who wear patent-leather oxfords and pretty open-toed shoes never get the bottom of their gowns soiled.
 An attorney in this village was arguing a case before a local magistrate not long ago. He was very earnest in summing up his case and in a burst of eloquence said: "If this argument is not clear, your honor, I have another that is equally conclusive."
 A police justice, who resides not so very far from this village, wears on his waistcoat a huge knicker star announcing in large letters his title and place of residence. The custom of tagging along justice is becoming a thing of the past in this village. Of course such prominent representatives of the law are apt to get lost in such crowds as assemble on the street corners each evening. A 50 cent star is a mighty pretty ornament.

There has been so much excitement in this ballcock since Governor Yates stopped off here while swinging around the circle four years ago, as was noticed Monday when a sneak thief was arrested. Justice A. H. Wilson was charged with having entered two business places and taken certain goods. Citizens rested from their labors and flocked to see the unfortunate fellow—not to play the Good Samaritan, but just rubber. Morbid curiosity is one accomplishment the American people can lay claim to.

A great, big clumsy looking pilgrim rambled into the village Saturday, having come from Waukegan via the route bedecked right of way of the "J" route. He stopped at a hotel and asked "if that big policeman with a fist like the hammer to a pile driver was here yet. He was informed that John was still here and his fist had not dwindled in the least. "Well," he said, "a couple of years ago I was here admiring the country and carried a little too long when that big fellow gave a big on the left wrist which straightened me out and then he applied his waukenfasts where my surface was the most prominent. I'm a harness maker by trade but ain't been able to sit down to work at the trade since then. Yes, this is a nice, hospitable place. If you go through it on a fast train."
 A Chicago man was summoned into a justice court here some days ago. He appeared, greatly to the surprise of the plaintiff's agent, and not liking the appearance of things took a change of venue. The plaintiff's representative did not wish to try the case, so he took a non-suit. The defendant was leaving the court, congratulating himself on getting out so neat, when he was again summoned to appear in the same action. "What kind of justice do they parcel out to people who they summon out here?" he asked. "The other kind" replied a bystander. "I was ready for trial and the plaintiff was ready to proceed, but as soon as I showed up the plaintiff discovered he had no case against me. Then he changed his tactics and pulled me again ten minutes afterward," said the defendant. In justice court practice that mode of procedure is known as "skrimishing for a default judgment."

Many of our people remember that prince of goodfellows, John Nicholson who used to live 678 for Will Thorp, the engineer known far and wide for his luxurious growth of hair and ability to converse in 12 foreign languages. John used to live here but the North-Western recognized his ability and elevated him to a good position in the master mechanic's office. While there he attracted the attention of the American Equipment company and now John is taking big contracts to equip railways with anything from a velocipede to a locomotive. John, beside being uncommonly handsome, was born under a lucky star.

A young man of this village, reared in an atmosphere of all that was good and strictly religious, was taught by his parents to follow closely the golden rule, and if someone should smite him on his well-massed right cheek to turn the left one and solicit one more smite. But he, evidently, like many other young men, does not always follow parental advice, and not long ago when an associate belted him on the law he did not cry for more but placed himself under protection of the law and had his friend placed upon peace bonds. Thus are early teachings soon forgotten.

Some of the neighborhood papers say that local dealers are storing their bins with coal. It is stated that the greatest coal strike in history is expected and serious developments may be looked for before the end of the winter. The operators are forcing this strike, and operators declare they will close up their mines before giving in.

The French Live Out of Doors.
 Moralists admit that we may go to France for fine arts and fashions, but generally draw the line on social customs. Now, the French are a happy and contented people. They can teach a lot of things to us, and it is not Americans something besides to go to Paris and what to wear. At least this is the opinion of Berkeley Smith, author of "Parisians Outdoors." He says:
 "The French are instinctively an out-of-doors living people. Life in the open air means to them the absence of the joy of living. Every year here is by the majority of Parisians spent at least one day in the country. The country is their cherished Mecca for a holiday and the safe retreat in town a universal refuge. Parisians prefer to never sleep with their windows open, yet they are often seen dining at the little tables in front of the restaurants throughout the four seasons of the year. They are not content with the open air and chilly enough to make us Anglo-Saxons turn our collars up and hurry home to a stove fire."
 France has its resorts for rich folk, but the common people cannot afford to visit them, and most Parisians take their outings near home. To quote further:
 "The Bois de Boulogne, long after night has fallen, is crowded with people. Whole families seated in some grassy spot watch the sun setting behind the candelabra in the middle of the July party; to distinguish by its flickering light during days and nights blustering and chilly enough to make us Anglo-Saxons turn our collars up and hurry home to a stove fire."

A Touching Story
 is the saving from death, of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyer, Cumberland, Md. Her story: At the age of 11 months our little girl was in declining health with serious throat trouble and two physicians gave her up. We were all in despair, when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health. Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At Barrington Pharmacy; 50c and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

Disarmament Not in Sight.
 A decrease in the military or naval establishment of the world powers is not to be expected now that a great war has developed new forces. We judge the future by the past. After the Franco-Prussian war there was a general overhauling by all the nations, and Europe became an armed camp. France had been humbled and wanted revenge, while her conqueror was determined not to be caught napping. Japan's achievements have been marvelous, but in the spectacle there is a menace. If a young nation by taking thought all nations will be in such heights in a day all nations will be ready. Preparedness will now be the universal watchword. Germany is of course alert. Recently Lord Roberts warned Great Britain of her weakness and pleaded that she get ready. France has never ceased to remember the fall down she made in 1870 and has been training, equipping and arming. Now that the ally she counted upon is crippled, she will be the more alert. Everywhere there are indications that big armaments will be bigger and that the military spirit will be fostered so that the men behind the guns will not be wanting when the hour strikes.

A reported movement against the hatpin as an implement of love and beauty for the ladies is not likely to have much effect. It has been said that physicians do not approve the hatpin because it
