Japanese Envoys Submit New Arrangement of Demand to Russians.

OFFER TO DIVIDE SAKHALIN

Proposition Allows the Payment of Indemnity in Return for Half the Island but Does Not Alter the Original Demand for Money.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 24.—"We arrived at nothing," anid M. Witte Wednesday evening after the peace conference had adjourned until Saturday, "Japan presented a new proposition, but it was merely old propositions in new words. We dispatched some of the protocols, but we arrived at nothing."

Japan made her conciliatory proposition in the protocols, but we arrived at nothing."

Japan made her conciliatory proposition of the editory proposition what they had asked for directly in their original terms of peace.

The new proposition sought to find a way to get an indemnity out of Russia without burting the national pride and honor of that country. Salve was applied.

Would Divide Sakhalin.

sia without burting the national pride and honor of that country. Salve was applied.

Would Divide Sakhalin.

The proposition was long and favolved. Reduced to simple terms, it sought to induce Russia to divide the terms of the conditions of 1815 and to pay Japan a sum not specified for the half Japan is willing to restore to Russia. Combined with this was a financial arrangement connected with the railroad.

In effect, Japan virtually withdrew her demand for an indemnity, as such, but proposed that Russia should pay not out an easy say tribeless, and pointed the restored that the said of the conclusion was reached. After the work on the protocols had been completed the Russians asked for an adjournment until Saturday. Four grotocols were completed and signed by all the envoys. They cover the work of the first four days of the conference, of the first four days of the conference are ready and will be signed at the next meeting.

This proposition of the Japanese has already been cabled to St. Peterburg. M. Witte refuses to take the revocability of deciding the adjournment.

burg. M. Witte refuses to take the responsibility of deciding the adjournmegt.

Will Not Pay Indamnity.
If an answer is received before Saturday and the Russians want another conference before that day one will be held. As it now is it is expected there will be no more meetings until Saturday.

M. Witte's statement: "We arrived at nothing," covers the situation thoroughly from the Russian viewpoint.
The Russians have been in constant committee of the received and the received care that they must not submit to an indemnity in any form whatever—"in whatever guise" were the words sent from St. Petersburg.
The fact that the Japanese presented a new proposition did not lighten the Russian gloom. There is not a man on the staff of M. Witte who is not certain the negotiations will end in an an extra of the Japanese decinitely settled that the Japanese some pretext or other and that the Russians will not pay. They still insist "not a kopeck."

Japanese Are Centent.

The Japanese Are Centent.

The Japanese have no comments to make. They think their magnanimity in changing their proposals so as to ayou'd wounding Russian honor by insisting on the term indemnity shows that we have been as to be a source of the first their section shifts the responsibility their, action shifts the responsibility to Russia and they are content to let Russia work it out as best she may. It fa quite certain that the Japanese are has anxious for peace as the Russians can be. They have established their principle and they want to quit and enjoy the fruits of their victory. Leading members of the Japanese suite admit this frankly. Still, Japan has spent much money and thinks she should be reimbursed. The Japanese envoys say, privately, that they must get money, that they must get money, that they cannot return bome without it.

There has been no letdown in the position of either side so far as public expression goes. The Russians maintain their position of "not a kopeck" almost fanatically. The Japanese are grim and determined. It is now to be decided which side is bluffing. It neither side is the war will continue.
