

The Peace Of-

(Observations on a cartoon.) "We'll call it the 'Peace of Fortmouth.' Says the loyal New Hampshire avian. "No, ye don't," says the down east Yankee. "It's the 'Peace of Kittery, Maine.' " "How's that?" says the youth from Portsmouth. "It's here the commissioners dwelled." "I don't care a dern," says the Kittery man. "It's here as the motto's was held."

"Now, hark ye both," says the president's friend; "The folks here got nothing to say. Who did all the work, I'd just like to know." "It's the 'Peace of Oyster Bay.'" Then authority speaks from the capital's halls: "For the government couldn't be 'done'—'This achievement gait,'" says the department of state. "It's the 'Peace of Washington.'"

In such a serious state of affairs, With trouble so surely a-brewin', If we can't have peace as to where they make peace, Why, then, let 'em go to rest. So I reckon there's only one thing to do To save us from strife and hate, And that's to beseech good Emperor Bill To come over and arbitrate.

RED WINGED SEA ROBINS.

They are among the most curious fish along our shores. I suppose the peculiarity which would be noticed first about the sea robin, greater or furred, as he is variously called, would be his clumsy shape. The head is large and deep in comparison with the body. One of our observing young folks, looking at him alive in his tank at the United States fish commission, Washington, would be apt to exclaim, "Oh, see, he has little hook claws which help him crawl along!" Sure enough, just in front of the pectoral or side fins are three little fingerlike processes on each side, which are used to stir up weeds and sand and to rake around among the pebbles and root out the small animals upon which the sea robin feeds in its native waters. While doing this it seems to be crawling along over the bottom by looking these peculiar claws into the sand.

Sea robins feed on small crabs, fish, shrimps and other diminutive animals which they find among the loose stones. In Europe all the gurnard family of fishes are eagerly sought, as they find a ready sale in the fish market. They attain a length of two feet and a weight of eleven pounds. Our species of the sea robin, a cousin to the European variety, is found on our northern coast and is taken in great numbers in the pond net. They are found where they spawn during the summer months.

They are much esteemed for the table, being one of the most delicate of the edible fishes. The flesh is firm, snow white and hard to distinguish from that of the kingfish. The American sea robins are fifteen to eighteen inches long and weigh from one and one-fourth to two pounds. When taken from the water they are quite loudly and if placed on the ground give a little hop forward of a few inches, grunting as they do so. This grunting sound can be heard quite plainly, if one is in a boat or quietly in shallow water near where they are.

The head is sheathed with bony plates and armed with sharp points, which are rather hard to distinguish at first, as they lie close against it. When caught they erect all their spines and inflict very painful wounds on those who try to handle them. The pectoral fins are a little more than half as long as the body and may be extended like a fan when in use or folded quite close together when on the bottom, thus giving them the name of butterfly fish.

The rays of the tail may also be much extended to look like a Japanese fan. The color of this peculiar fish is a brownish yellow over the back and sides and cream white below. The pectoral fins are deep orange color, with a blackish marking toward the tips, crossed all over with little dark brown lines and edged with light yellow orange color. The lower jaw is a beautiful turquoise blue, edged with a vein of brassy yellow.—St. Nicholas.

Placing the Responsibility. A small boy, who was once seven or eight years of age, was once sent to the office of a Brooklyn school principal for some offense. The principal said that the little fellow had an unusually straight nose and honest appearance, so he concluded to lead up to the proper punishment for the young offender by asking him a few questions.

"If you were a teacher what would you do with a boy who acted as you did this morning in the classroom?" he asked. "I'd send him to the principal," promptly replied the boy. "What do you think the principal ought to do with such a boy?" continued the questioner. "That's up to you," was the reply. The boy escaped punishment.—School Journal.

Ghosts and Dwarfs. In life giants are usually weak-minded, as well as frail of body, and as a rule they do not live long. Dwarfs, on the other hand, are often plimble witted

Some cases a "good chance" of longevity. An Austrian emperor in the seventeenth century took the whim to round up all the giants and dwarfs in his empire and turn them in together. Apprehension was expressed that the big ones would terrify the small ones, but it was the other way. The giants were compelled to ask for protection from the impish tricks of the dwarfs, and they had to be separated before peace prevailed among them.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A Bad Habit. The Helmses—Papa, I am considerably embarrassed to discover that I am engaged to marry both the duke and the count. "How like your mother, to jump in and buy more than she wants, just because it is cheap"—Life.

Very New. "I thought you told me that Miss Trastie's country 'n' go to rest. "She is—old as the hills." "Don't believe it. I kissed her a few minutes ago and found that the paint was still fresh."—Cleveland Leader.

It is impossible for that man to despair who remembers that his helter is omnipotent.—Jeremy Taylor.

DOBBIN OBEYS BUGLE CALL. When it sounds "Charge" Old Army Horse Wreck's Butcher Cart. He was a big white horse, with small ears that had a habit of turning back and a big square head that swung low to the breast strap, which drew a load of mutton for Louis Feinberg of Brooklyn down Front street the other evening to the Hamilton ferry, says the New York Herald. The load was heavy, and it had forgotten the brand "U. S. C. H. C." on the hip, where army horses carry their medals of honor.

"Oh, no, blow it," said a civilian admirer of a young bugler who stopped at that time off the Governors Island ferryboat Hancock on leave of absence and with his bugle under his arm. "The young bugler put the reins to his lips, and the cracking notes of "walk" rang over South ferry. The white horse picked up his ears. "Trot!" cried the bugle.

"Whoa! What's the matter with you?" exclaimed Mr. Feinberg. "Gee!" said the bugle. "Whoa! Whoa! Back!" said Mr. Feinberg, waving on the reins. The big muscles of the white horse stood up like carved marble. He knew what was coming. No idd everybody else in the neighborhood, for drawing the mutton wagon as if it were a feather-weight he plunged straight ahead, with both ears up and nostrils open wide.

"Charge!" cracked the bugle. There was a dash of white from Front street, there was a scurrying of sidewalk merchants on the sidewalk in front of South ferry, there were laments as stand after stand went over, and a big white horse, every bit of harness gone, but with eyes flashing and head up, struck the closed gates of the Hamilton ferry a resounding blow. The mutton wagon, with the assistance of about fifteen men, was removed from the entrance to the "L" stairs, where it stood on end. Feinberg, with the aid of several citizens, succeeded in getting a halter on the neck of the white horse and he led him across the ferry. The wagon stayed in Manhattan overnight.

FAST ELK RANCHES. Michigan Plans to Supply Market With Elk Venison at Reasonable Price. O. R. Fowler, a prominent banker of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., has come to Chicago to present to certain business men of the city a scheme for utilizing

Ayer's Hair Vigor. Sometimes the hair is not properly nourished. It suffers for food, starves. Then it falls out, turns prematurely gray. Ayer's Hair Vigor is a hair food. It feeds, nourishes. The hair stops falling, grows long and heavy, and all dandruff disappears.

Poor Hair. The waste lands of northern Michigan and Wisconsin, says the Chicago Chronicle. Thousands of acres of land in that section have been left waste by the cutting down of the timber, and as they are unfit for agricultural purposes it is proposed to utilize at least a portion of them by starting great herds of elk, with a view to supplying the market with elk venison at reasonable rates. The idea has already been worked out to good advantage in Canada and in a small way in the upper peninsula of Michigan.

According to Mr. Fowler, the elk are very prolific, and will prosper care of the elk farms, or ranches as they should perhaps be called, can be made to yield big profits. They require very little care, and there has always been an excellent market for the venison, which at present commands from 50 to 65 cents per pound. A similar movement was put on foot in New England several years ago, and the most gratifying results have been attained. The elk ranchers of Canada state that the elk are not destructive feeders, nor do they range widely when properly cared for and not molested. They can be cared for as easily as cattle and give better profit. Mr. Fowler states that arrangements are practically complete for the establishment of several ranches on property owned by Chicago lumbermen, Chicago and Sault Ste. Marie capital exclusively will back the enterprise. The business animals for starting the industry will be brought from some of Mr. Fowler's Canadian farms.

QUENTIN'S CORNERS. Wm. Buschang and family of Wau-pun, Wis., were visiting old friends here lately.
