CONFESS TO TORTURE.

The Bandits who Robbed and Tortured Fore Bros. in Custody.

Saturday night, September 24th a quartet of masked bandits forced an entrance into the little house occupied by Fore brothers, located near Spring Lake factory, and after torturing the brothers compelled them to reveal the hiding place of the money they had on hand. The bandits secured nearly $400 and then made their escape.

Early Sunday morning a search of the surrounding country was begun and a trail of the robbers followed to Elgin where the clue was lost.

Detectives were given the case and began the chase. It was found that certain thoughts among members of the "shoe factory gang" of Elgin were missing and suspicion at once pointed to that gang. A tip furnished the detectives was to the effect that two of the suspects were seen in Chicago. A hot chase followed and Detective Benches tracked the money through the hide district to Rockford, Savannah, Ill., then to Winona, Minn., finally rounding up two of the quartet, William Herder and Ben Doss, at La Crosse, Wis., where they were held for a freight car. Fred Brown and Will Gooby, other members of the gang, were apprehended at Elgin, to which city they had returned.

Will Herder and Bill Gooby are ex-convicts out on parole; Fred Brown and Ben Doss were well known in Elgin. Brown having been mixed up in several affairs.

Doss confessed to the crime and implicated the "bunch" naming Herder as the leader and one who planned the job. The prisoners are held in the McHenry county jail.

All members of the gang are known in Elgin, Dundee, Carpentersville and Algonquin as toughs of the very worst brand, and citizens of that section are greatly relieved that the bunch is behind the bars.
