

BLOODY STRIKE RIOT

NON-UNION CAR CREWS REPLY TO STONES WITH BULLETS.

MOB FRANTIC WITH RAGE

Eight Men Are Shot in San Francisco, One of Whom Dies Later—Police Are Slow to Use Force.

San Francisco.—A pitched battle between strike-breakers in the uniforms of car inspectors and strikers and their sympathizers was fought Tuesday afternoon on Turk street for more than an hour. Eight men were shot, among them a policeman and Detective Bell, and several of the wounded men died in the night.

The shooting was done by strike-breakers from car windows, in response to showers of paving stones and bricks hurled at them by the mob that chased the cars block after block, picking up their wounded as they ran. Many squads of police reserves were called out and, with their drawn revolvers they chased and dispersed the mob.

The bloody affray was the outcome of the first attempt of the United Railroads to run passenger cars out of their Turk and Fillmore street barns at 2:30 p. m. A reporter who rode on horseback behind a string of cars saw four men shot from the car windows. The first shot was fired at the intersection of Turk and Buchanan streets, by a guard from the rear platform of the car that headed the string of seven.

The bullet struck a young man standing on the sidewalk and inflicted a flesh wound in his arm. The shot was not fired until most of the windows of the car had been smashed with stones, several of which had struck and severely bruised some of the guards on board.

The shooting of this man aroused the mob to a pitch of frenzy. Paving stones and other obstructions were cast on the track and the car was brought to a standstill a block farther on. Hurling any missiles that came easiest to hand, cursing and screaming for the lives of the strike-breakers, hundreds of men and boys surrounded the car. In a moment a fusillade of shots rang out and the crowd fell back.

At several other points the rioting and shooting were renewed. Competent observers of the rioting expressed freely the opinion that the tragic happenings of the afternoon might have been in large measure averted if the adequate police force had been on hand, and the police had not hesitated to use force in opposing violence.

BUSINESS LOOKING UP SOME.

IRISH BILL IN COMMONS
MEASURE SEEKING SELF-GOVERNMENT INTRODUCED.

Big Crowd Fills British House to Witness Introduction by Chief Secretary Birrell.

London.—The Irish bill was introduced in the house of commons Tuesday by the chief secretary for Ireland, Mr. Birrell. The introduction of this measure had been anticipated with the keenest interest, as it presents in a new form the long-drawn-out struggle of Ireland for self-government. In anticipation of the event the house of commons was crowded, the lobby and galleries being filled with the conspicuous figures in the Irish movement. The bill had been drafted by Mr. Birrell, who succeeded Mr. Bryce, on the latter's recent appointment as ambassador at Washington and to some extent followed the lines of the measure which Mr. Bryce had tentatively framed for Ireland.

Prior to the appearance of the measure it was popularly known as the "Irish bill," but today its advocates refer to it as the "Irish common bill," owing to its creation of a council to take over a number of the administrative functions of the government in Ireland and the general public bill is the "Irish bill," with home rule presented in such new and modified form as to enlist the support of the elements of the Irish movement.

Mr. Birrell's explanation of the new bill was received with deep interest and unwavering attention. Its terms had been kept secret except to a few of the foremost Irish patriots, so that all alike were in the thick of expectancy in regard to the measure.

The bill does not give complete home rule, nor has it been the purpose of the government to grant Ireland complete self rule at a single stroke. On the contrary, as Mr. Birrell explained, the government's measure is but a stepping-stone; it is at least some measure of self rule for Ireland over Irish affairs, and this much accomplished it gives some promise of the ultimate realization of complete home rule. It remains to be seen whether the Irish and the Irish leaders will accept the measure as a sufficient realization of their hopes for home rule.
