The HOLSMAN Automobile

PERFECT IN CONSTRUCTION, CHEAP IN PRICE and COST of OPERATING

When you see the HOLSMAN machine it will make you its friend at once for these reasons:

1. Solid tires, admitting of no punctures.
2. Air cooled. No water to contend with, or broken jackets which occur in frosty weather.
3. No live axles.
4. No transmission gears.
5. No drive gears.
6. No speed gears, in fact, not any gears to contend with. No clutches. The machine rides as easy as the best made carriage and is controlled by two simple hand levers. It started, gulped, stopped, speeded, reversed and fully controlled by these two simple levers.

Should you have a breakdown, repairs are quickly secured. However, the chances of a breakdown are slim in a Holman. Write me for catalog and descriptive matter.

Motion of Planets and Satellites.

All the planets travel the same way round. This is true not only of the eight primary planets, but of the asteroids. Again, all the secondary planets or satellites travel the same way round, this direction of revolution being the same as that in which the planets revolve around the sun, except the satellites of Uranus, which, however, can hardly be said to have any direction of motion with reference to the general level in which the planetary system circulates, for they travel in planes nearly square to that level. Lastly, as respects direction of motion, all the planets whose rotation has been observed, including our earth and moon and the sun also, rotate on their axes in the same direction. It must be understood that the direction is one and the same for all these motions—the revolutions of the planets around the sun, of the satellites around the planets and of the planets on their axes. It seems natural to infer that the uniformity is the result of some general condition affecting the whole scheme from the beginning.—Richard A. Proctor.

A Poor Start.

There was a glom on Mr. Fowler's countenance which nothing save the lack of some desired article of food had ever been known to produce. "What's the matter, Ezra?" queried Mr. Fowler's nearest neighbor, after a glance at his lugubrious face. "Flapjacks given out over at your house?" "Worse'n that," groaned the distressed one. "You know 'twasn't apple year, and we've got so low already m' wife says we can't have any more apple pie for breakfast." "Can't you make out if you have it now at night?" asked the neighbor, without a smile. "Can, because I've got 'em," said Mr. Fowler testily. "But I tell ye it upsets me, starting in the day wrong like that!"—Youth's Companion.

ANCIENT ATHENS.

Banqueting in the Queen's City in the Time of Plato.

In Professor T. G. Tucker's "Life in Ancient Athens" the author gives this as a picture of a typical banquet in that city in the time of Plato: "When all are in place the servants come round with a vessel, from which they pour water over the hands of the guests. These are brought in small tables, light and ornamental, one of which is set down before each couch for two persons, and on these are placed the several dishes as they come by order. The tables are lower than the couches, so that the right hand can reach down easily to them. Knives and forks there are none. The food is taken up with the fingers. It is true that in dining with very soft foods or gravies or in extracting things from shells spoons were not unknown, but usually the fingers were assisted by pieces of bread hollowed out for the purpose. It is clear that there was plenty of room for neatness and daintiness in handling food, and it was no small advantage to have fingers not too sensitive.

"There were no napkins. Portions of soft bread, often especially prepared for the purpose, were used for wiping the fingers and were afterward thrown to the dogs which might be present to catch them; but, apart from the dogs, it may be something of a shock to learn that the floor, which was, of course, without a carpet, was the receptacle for shells, bones, peelings and other fragments, which were, however, swept out at a given stage of the proceedings. Conversation meanwhile must be general. The first half of dinner consists of substantial, particularly fish and birds, etc. if they could be got, comparatively little meat (such as beef, lamb and pork) and vegetables dressed to a degree of which we should hardly approve with oil, vinegar, honey and sauces.

"During this part of the meal wine is not drunk. The Athenians kept their drinking as separate as possible from their eating. Water is then brought round again, hands are washed, the tables are carried out, the floor is swept, a chant is sung to the accompaniment of the flute, a libation of wine is poured out to the words 'to the good genius' or 'to good health,' and the second part of the banquet begins. The tables are brought in again, and what we call dessert would for the occasion called by the Athenians the second table." On these are placed fruits, fresh and dried; salted almonds, sweetmeats, cheese and salt.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

To cure nose bleeding, the a striv-very tightly around the small part of the thumb below the knuckle. If a teaspoonful of table salt dissolved in a half glassful of cold water will give instant relief in case of heart-burn.

People with poor digestion should drink no water with meals, but take a glassful half an hour before and drink plentifully an hour or so after each meal.

To inhale steam from a bowl of boiling water is very good for a sore throat. The steam should be over the steam, drawing it in both throat and nostrils.

Many cases of indigestion, headache, neuralgia, cold hands and feet can be quickly cured by drinking slowly one or two pints of water so hot that it almost burns the throat.

Warts may be entirely removed by washing the hands two or three times a day with the water in which potatoes have been boiled or by bathing the wart several times with potato water.

Where Do the Cents Go?

Nobody knows what becomes of the millions on millions of cents that are minted annually, the production varying from 25,000,000 to 100,000,000 per annum. The sinks into which they disappear and are gone forever, the phenomenon seems strange and is not easily accounted for. People say, "What becomes of all the pins?" That is exactly the same case. They soon corrode and thus are transformed into nothing that is recognizable. A copper cent, on the other hand, is indestructible, comparatively speaking. But the solution of the problem seems to be that cents are subject to more accidents than any other coins. They change hands ten times as often as dimes, for example, and, being of small value, they are not cared for.—Los Angeles Times.

A Brotherly Act.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford commanded a naval brigade in the Sudan when the British were fighting there. One day when the Arabs were making a terrific onrush the admiral's life was saved by a mule which fell dead upon him. When the square had been reformed and the Arabs were routed, Lord Charles was rescued. He looked at the mule for a moment and then remarked gratefully, "Now, that poor beast did what I should call a brotherly act."

A Slight.

"Do you know, I saw something remarkable just now," observed a broker to a friend in front of the Stock Exchange in Broad Street.

"What was it?"

"I saw no fewer than five leading lawyers of the manorial district walk past, and every one of them had his hands in his own pockets."—New York Tribune.

A Difficulty.
