An Invitation. When Alcibiades was told that his countrymen had passed sentence of death upon him for being at the head of a conspiracy to overthrow the religious and political constitution of Athens he said, "I will show them I still live." He obtained from Sparta assurance of personal safety and went forth. He delighted and charmed the Spartans, as he had the Athenians in his earlier years. He adopted their customs and dress and was the strictest Spartan of them all. He wore his hair short as he had the Athenians of the Eorians and ate their black bread and barley bread. They believed that he had been misrepresented. In truth, as Plutarch said, "he changed color and character." In Sparta he was grave, temperate and fond of physical exercise; in Ionia he was easy going, luxurious and merry; in Thrace he was drunken, in Thessaly he was devoted to horse-ship, and in the court of the Persian satraps he surpassed Themistocles himself in magnificence. As Sparta was to be the scene of the Athenian victory, he showed the people their danger, advising them to begin active operations against that city. No letter advice could have been given them, and they profited by it.

Questioning Is Not Conversation. The man who imagines that the art of conversation consists in asking questions spends much of his time, as the man who never asks any. People of this description will interrupt a speaker as frequently as they do in the French chamber of deputies, and from subject to subject with their interrogatories, like a cackling hen that is going to lay an egg. Horace Walpole, when asked at Houghton, remembers the expression of the person existing in an aunt. Writing to his friend Sir Horace Mann, he says: "I have an aunt here, a family piece of goods, an old remnant of acquisitive hospitality and economy. She comes to my house by day and night with interrogations that I dreamed all night she was at my ear with a who's, why's, when's and what's till at last in my very sleep I cried out, 'For heaven's sake, madam, ask me no more questions.'"

Dr. Johnson's dislike of being questioned is well known, and he gives the reason for it. He says that he has his own inimitable style, "but, as he is not the mode of conversation among gentlemen, it is assuming a superiority, and it is particularly wrong to assume one concerning himself."—Chambers' Journal.

Gooseberries on Trees. Travelers in Burma see many strange things and take the first of the strangest is the way in which some kind of fruit grow. For instance, gooseberries that at home grow on small bushes in this part of the world grow on trees over two feet high. They are not a soft, pulpy fruit, but are as hard as marbles. The real Burman grapes also grow on high trees and not on the ground. They hang from the branches and tremble at the least breeze and a long stalk and are covered with a thick outer skin, which cannot be eaten. The peach, or monkey nut, is also peculiar and consists of a large, fibrous fruit with its nut or kernel attached to the outside of the fruit at the end farthest from the stalk from which it hangs.—London Standard.

Troutler—He told me about this time last year that he had arrived at the continent that the first of the Europe would do him good. Holmes—Yes and he's there yet. Troutler—in Europe? Holmes—No; where he had arrived when you saw him.—Philadelphia Press.

Write unless you make a crying baby to sleep or quickly to her master for a book. He asked her, "What do you want a book for?" She said, "I often see you go to sleep the moment you get into your bed and I want to put baby to sleep."—From the Chinese.

Jackie—Does your father know anything about music, Tommy? Tommy (whose father is an old policeman)—Yes. Jackie—Well, what does he know? Tommy—He knows how many bars there are in a beat, for I have heard him tell another so.—Tit-Bits.

Passenger on Atlantic liner—Hello, old man! Had breakfast? Personally Conducted Tourist (going on rail)—For about fifteen minutes.—Puck.

Health in the Canal Zone. The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fevers and malaria. It has been known to those who have used Electric Blitters, who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influence with Electric Blitters on hand. Cures blood poison too, biliousness, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles Guaranteed by Barrington Pharmacy. 50c.

Men and Gossip. "When it comes to gossip, there is no locality of the section. If fancy men have the disreputable remarks a London paper, 'If a scandal is a scandal in society, a dark cloud is over hanging the ministry, all coming to where is it first discussed?' or where is it first discussed? It is the men's clubs. Hence it is the female gossip, and if they in mention what my husband has said to the club they are at once set down as scandal mongers, while the originator of the scandal goes free. In a country house, too, are not the men as ready to tell tales as the women? I prefer to bring forward the en. late, news, political, social or financial. Many women let their tongues run on. It is true, but so do many men."
