THE BLACK BEAR.

Her Physic and Her Food After Her Five Months' Sleep.

The black bear has her cubs, from she to three, in her den the first months of March and April and it is an interesting thing to know that she has the power to give birth to her young at least two weeks before the proper time if driven from her den. She will return to her cubs if let alone. In the den she cares for her young until the snows of the north country have sufficiently melted to permit her to return about when she "hits the trail" again. She eats nothing during the five months that she hibernates, except that from time to time she will lap the icicles which is made by the freezing of her breath on her paws. She ventures forth as soon as the snow has sufficiently melted to permit her getting about and for several days will eat nothing but hemlock bark and certain roots, which act as a physic. When in her normal state of health again she is ravenously hungry and will diligently fish the brooks and streams in search of a dinner of trout, will hunt up the carcasses of deer or moose which have been overborne by the severity of the winter and will prey upon porcupines by quickly putting her paw under the stomach and rolling the porcupine on its back, then with a slip tear out the entrails and escape the quills—Field and Stream.

PILLS AS WEAPONS.

The Curious Deal That Was Arranged by a Doctor.

An extraordinary deal, which at the time created an immense sensation, was one in which the decision was arrived at not by sword or pistol, but by means of a deadly poison. The men—who, it is hardly necessary to say, had fallen out over a lady—had left the arrangement of details to their seconds, and until they faced each other they did not know by what method they were to settle their differences. One of the seconds was a doctor, and he had made up for the occasion four black pellets, all identical in size and shape. "In one of these," he said, "I have placed a sufficient quantity of prussic acid to cause the almost instantaneous death of any one who swallows it. We will decide by the loss of a coin which of you is to have first choice, and you will alternately draw and swallow a pill until the poison shows its effects." Two of the pellets were then taken as the toss had decided, but without effect in either case. "This time," said the doctor, speaking of the two pellets remaining, "you must both swallow the pill at the same instant." The choice was again made, and in a few seconds one of the men lay dead on the grass—Fall Mall Gazette.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS.

The Quarter of an Hour Following the Winning of the Derby.

The anxieties of owners of race horses competing in the Derby do not immediately end as the horses pass the judges. The fatal "objection" may snatch the laurels from the victor. The possibility discovered itself over Caracacus' race. The owner had striven in vain to get a jockey of repute. He offered a life annuity of £100 a year to the winner of the race, and he got Gostley in case of success had been declined. A stable boy named Parsons had eventually to be trusted, and to the surprise of the learned, he got the horse home, winning by a neck. Going to scale, the lad could not draw the weight. In breathless silence the bride was sent for, and that she enabled him to balance the scale. But now Lord Stamford appeared to object that only his own horse and two others had gone the full course. The winner and the rest were already past the starting post when the flag fell. Admiral Ross looked at his watch. "Twenty minutes," he said, "has objection to hold good must be lodged within a quarter of an hour." And so the stable boy's win passed into the records, and the owner of Caracacus declared that that for £1,000 a year would be again endure the agony of that short period following the race.—Lancet Saturday Review.

Non-sensical Literature.

I believe it was Dr. Quinby who said, "None but a man of extraordinary talent can write first rate nonsense." He was right. And he might have added that none but a man of extraordinary taste can fully appreciate first rate nonsense.—Japan Times.
