Why He Left His House.
In the Paris Louvre is a famous art collection, valued at $200,000, which was given to the institution by M.
Camille Groult. In the collection are some of the finest works of Watteau, Fragonard, Reynolds, Galnabourgh, Turner, and Constable. M. Groult's house on the Avenue Malakoff was an interesting that Alexandre Dumas his once told the collector that he could not understand why he ever wanted to leave it. "I will tell you," replied M.
Groult: "it is for the pleasure of entering it again."—London Illustrated News.

"I like work, but—
"But what?"
"I will admit that it's an acquired taste."

Huge Battleships In Theory.
All nations which are ambitious of great sea power want ships as large as those of any other nation; hence the contest for size makes ever newer and larger vessels necessary. The way the contest stands at present among naval experts is explained by the Scientific American. Modern tactics, this paper says, call for "line ahead formation"—that is, with each ship at a distance steaming in the wake of the one ahead, with a wide interval between them. Thus a line of four eight-gun ships will be but half as long as a line of eight four-gun ships.
The line of four eight-gun ships will attack the four four-gun ships at the head of the line of smaller vessels and overcome them by mere preponderance of metal, then attack and dispose of the other four smaller ships.

It is assumed that the fifth and sixth ship in the line of four-gun ships will do little execution while the eight gun ships are smashing the four leading ships, but that the seventh and eighth can do nothing, owing to the long range. Upon the theory that naval battles of the future must be fought out just this way, the authorities of the rival powers are proceeding when they put millions into mammoth ships. But perhaps some future Nelson or Paul Jones will happen into a light and apply the big "D" to tactics. It all seems to be a question of what thirty-two twelve-inch guns on one side can do to thirty-two twelve-inch guns on the other ship. A Jones or a Nelson might not be disposed to keep a dozen, more or less, of his gun out of the scrimmage and let four big ships have their own way with the four little ships at the head of his line.
Torpedoes seem to be left out of calculation in this theory of naval warfare. Even then there may arise some daring commander, not sound on approved tactics, who is himself as good as a whole arsenal of torpedoes. Once a small ship does the trick for a big one, the small and lively "terror of the ocean" will again be in fashion.

Carrying American Cash to Europe.
The returning immigrants from the United States who passed through the port of Hamburg in one day recently exchanged $18,000 for the currency of their native countries, to be used in railroad fares and pocket money for their return home. The most of them had on their persons drafts and gold which represents savings to live on or to invest at home. The commuties where these returning adventurers settle will find them very desirable acquaintances if they put their money and their practical knowledge to use.

It is assumed abroad, and to a certain extent here, that the departing emigrants from our shores are going home for a visit, because there is a prospect of a long period of idleness in this country. This may be true, but it is noticeable that the bulk of the emigrants who return through Bremen are natives of countries which have recently invited and even urged their exiled people to come back to the motherland. If they are wanted at home it is most probable that the rulers will consider some means of keeping them now that they are on the spot comfortably supplied with money earned in America.

Japan, insisting that China shall apologize and indemnify her for the seizure of a Japanese steamship, will, of course, have her own way. Either tutelage or terror must be the condition of China in her relations with Japan until she learns how to free herself or until some combination of powers stronger than Japan does the freeing for her.

The battleship cruise may prove to have an educational value. The sailors have been permitted to see the sunlight at Lima, and as many of them are familiar with football mixups and with ring contests they are now qualified to give an expert opinion as to which is the most brutal.

It is estimated that Mark Twain during his lifetime has made $700,000 by his writings and lectures. At 30 cents a word it looks as if Mark has succeeded in financing the whole dictionary.

Somewhat when a man dies from the effects of handling dirty money he gets more space in the newspapers than one who dies of starvation.

Proclamations to abolish the czar of Russia will probably amount to just as much as the czar's proclamations against discontent and no more.

With Russia penniless and Turkey without cash, the war is much more likely to be of the typewriter variety than anything else.

The general opinion seems to be that while the United States may by a little "soft" in spots, it would be exceedingly hard to whip.

If, as an army officer declares, "Germany could capture New York easily," war isn't such a terrible thing after all.

We will be glad to see the motto brought on the coins, and we will also be glad to see more of the coins.

Good For Everybody.
Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert Building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is good for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter; as a blood purifier it is unequaled. 50c. at the Barrington
