Nearly all public schools in cities and villages are named and have the name above the main door, so why aren't the little country schools designated by their names above the door, also? This trifling expense would serve several good purposes, giving the children a personal pride in their particular school, serving as a guide to the parents, and giving each school individuality.

John Keene Roosevelt, cousin of President Roosevelt, has arrived at Libertyville from Phoenix, Ariz., with a contingent of race horses. He intends to leave for Long Island in a few days, planning to make the trip on horseback. His wealthy father has a stock farm there. According to a report just published by the Massachusetts secretary of state, 280,104 men were assessed a poll-tax last year, but only 349,369 voted at the state election. The Boston Daily Advertiser something ago published statistics showing that, except at presidential elections, the majority of the men in Massachusetts who could register and vote never do so. Their indifference is not looked upon as a cause for debarring the state from the privilege of majority from casting their ballots, and the suffragists are asking why the same reasoning should not apply to woman.—Woman's Journal.

Home Trade Homesites. When your next door neighbor sells the same kind of goods that the mail order catalogue advertises and at corresponding prices, you need a doctor's attention if you purchase by the mail route.

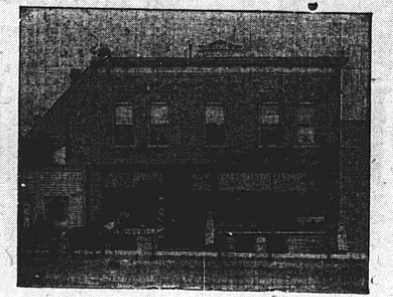

Every tub must stand on its own bottom. So also must every town. If you knock the bottom out of prosperity in your town by doing a large part of your buying from the catalogue houses, the place is calculated to fall down pretty soon.

If the farmer who does a good deal of buying from mail order concerns expects to continue selling his vegetables and other products to his home town, he should remember that it is a poor rule that won't work both ways.

Folks looking for bargains need not confine their researches to the large and lurid catalogues from the city houses. Sometimes local newspapers advertise bargains to be had right at home, and it might pay to look for such things in the home papers. Then if you don't find what you want ask the merchant why he doesn't advertise. The city mail order store is the real octopus. Its thousands of tentacles are sucking in money from every direction. Money is the blood of a community, and it is drunk by the octopus to such an extent the town is sure to become anaemic.

A Hint to the Wise. The Paris (Mo.) Appeal, referring to the business done by mail order houses throughout the various counties in Missouri, editorially says: "Advertising is costing the merchants of Monroe county thousands of dollars every year—not that our merchants actually pay on thousands of dollars each year for advertising, but the great department stores in the cities advertise every day in the year, telling the public just what they have to sell and what it will cost. The papers carrying these advertisements and thousands of price lists go all over the county, and people see them long before they see the goods and take them from the city stores. Who can blame them? Merchants all over this county have the same goods and often for less money, but they never see or know it, so he sends for his goods. Now, if the merchants in this county were to use the same methods that the city merchants use the mail order houses would get but few orders from old Monroe."
