The public is cordially invited to the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Kirby next Tuesday evening, June 2nd, to attend the "experience social" of St. Anne's Catholic church. A program will be given. Cake and lemonade, ten cents.

No attention is being paid to the ordinance prohibiting loughing in or about public places and sidewalks. Certain points down town are almost impassible evenings, much to the annoyance of passing ladies and girls.

The German classes of the high school have prepared a very entertaining program all in German, to be given in the school auditorium, Monday evening, June 1st. Come and hear the songs and recitations of the Fatherland.

Special interest was taken by Methodists of this village in the election of the Rev. William A. Quayle of Chicago to the bishopric in the conference in Baltimore last week, on account of his recent visit to Barrington. Mr. Quayle is only forty-six years old.

Mrs. Alexander Robertson, wife of the mayor of Highland Park, has received from a recent from a letter and expects to leave in July for a trip through Scotland and Germany with Mr. Robertson, who is also a member of the Lake county board of supervisors.

Miss Emily Lee, of Chicago, teacher at the Langeheute school three years ago, and Mrs. Connor, were guests of Mrs. Sam Gieske and Miss Bowman last Saturday. Mrs. Connor had never been in the country surrounding Chicago and was much impressed by the beautiful scenery around Barrington.

The G. A. R. and W. R. C. memorial service at Barrington Center church last Sunday afternoon consisted of talks by Commander Reuter, Rev. Stanger, H. H. Williams and H. H. Hubbard with good singing by the St. Paul's church choir. The audience attending filled the building.

The lower floor of the Peters building was turned into a dance hall last week and the first dance given there by William Hager, the lessee. Graphophone music was furnished. The dancers were few, as people hesitated to attend when the entrance was mobbed by men and boys, blocking the walk, and grying the dancers.

A drive through the village of Palestine brings content to a resident of Barrington, who appreciates more than ever the fine content walks, the well kept lawns, the removal of old fences and weeds from the road, in this our advancing, beautiful village of Barrington. We even have our main roads swept now by a hustling marshal.

The funeral service for Mrs. Elmina McIntosh, aged eighty-four years, who died Friday, May 22nd, was held Sunday morning at the Baptist church following the regular church service. Turkey's Elaborate Armories.

Turkey prizes itself in its armories and claims that no other country in the world can equal them. Constantinople boasts the roomiest and handsomest of all. The armories there are like palaces, with all the comforts and conveniences modern genius can supply. These buildings are all erected on high ground and in many cases strike the eye of the approaching tourist before the gates of Constantinople are reached. This is true particularly of the Haidan Pasha and Pera armories, which always arouse the admiration of newcomers to the Turkish capital. The armories are surrounded by huge gardens, with large courts and terraces, and reflect credit upon the Turkish architects.

"You have myopia, haven't you?" asked the eye doctor who had called at the public library to look at a reference book. "I don't know, sir," said the neglected attendant, blinking at him, "but if we have you'll find it in the catalogue."

Co-operative Farming.

It will take a long time for the American of adventurous habit to fall in line with common ownership, and probably the last to give will be the farmer. It is not solely the profit on his plant which the farmer takes into account in sising up his gains, but his independence. And he likes his old home and clings to it even in hard times. He has thought that come rain or drought or frost or sun he can pay his taxes and plod along somehow. But in co-operation the farmer may find a way out of the difficulties which steadily confront the small proprietor, and the government commission which has been suggested to aid in extending the co-operative system seems to have in it the germ of great usefulness.

Under the present commercial system the farmer is generally isolated. He must buy of the merchant and manufacturer and sell to them, but he deals in small quantities and can seldom take advantage of the state of the market. It has been shown by experiment that some of the disadvantages under which the individual farmer labors can be removed by co-operation. He can buy and sell on better terms, can keep in touch with the best market, and, moreover, feel that he is part of a great commercial and industrial unit while remaining practically an independent factor. An intelligent government commission should be able to systematize the many co-operative features which have sprung up almost at random among agriculturists and aid in extending the best of these features indefinitely. What is needed in a general way is a co-ordination of the various forces and agencies devoted to the same end, and on this line the commission, in the light of experiments in other countries, notably Great Britain, and in certain small beginnings here, has been made here, would find ample scope for its activities.

Wallington Whipped by a Girl.

The "Iron Duke" suffered a severe defeat when a boy at the hands of a schoolgirl two years younger than himself. He was spending a holiday in north Wales and while playing at marbles with a boy of his district got into a dispute. His opponent's sister, who was watching the game, secretly defended her brother. The future hero declined to yield up the disputed marble, whereupon the young girl fell upon him and fought so desperately that he was forced to retire from the field ignominiously vanquished.—London Chronicle.

The Ocean Liner Purser.

The purser on a transatlantic liner is an exceedingly busy man when his steamer comes abreast of quarantine. His troubles begin some five hours before the steamer arrives off Sandy Hook and continue until every passenger has left the pier. The purser is besieged by passengers who wish to exchange foreign money for American; he is expected to remember that his list is expected to dock, when to set his watches ahead and reply to hundreds of other trivial questions.—New York Tribune.

Sitting on His Hat.

I can vouch for the fact that in parliament hats are still set on. How, indeed, can a man who has just put all his mental energy into a peroration be expected to remember that his hat is on the seat directly beneath him? Down he sits and with an explosive crackle converts what had once been tall and glossy into the semblance of a half a dozen lemons. Amid the more childish joys of the house there is no incident that can compare with this.—R. C. Lehmann, M. P., in Cassell's Magazine.

The Flank March.

"Stonewall died," ran one of the most popular fables, "and two angels came down from heaven to take him back with them. They went to his tent. He was not there. They went to the hospital. He was not there. They went to the other tents. He was not there. They went to the prayer meeting. He was not there. So they had to return without him, but when they reported that he had disappeared they found that he had made a flank march and reached heaven before them."—Stonewall Jackson, by Lieutenant Colonel G. P. R. Heisterman.

Teacher-Tonnie, what is the plural of pauper?

Tonnie: Why, porpoise, ma'am.—Yonkers Statesman.
