Stolen Horse Found Dead.
Wednesday Robert Comstock received word that his horse and carriage stolen two weeks ago had been found in a livory barn at Irving Park. The insurance agent who hired the horse from the Comstock livery and disappeared, drove the animal along the river towns and then to Chicago where he stabled it and again disappeared. The exhausted creature killed by an officer of the Humane Society.

Mr. Comstock will recover the buggy but the horse's death is a complete loss to him, beside expense incurred tracing it.

A Lodge in Africa.

Some weeks ago James Creelman stated in Pearson's Magazine that President Roosevelt wished to isolate himself as far as possible at the expiration of his term in the White House and would go to Africa for that purpose. President Roosevelt has since stated that he has first upon Africa as his destination. Mr. Creelman's guess may have been inspired from the White House in so far as it related to Africa and perhaps he spoke by the card in giving reasons for the African trip. He stated that the president wants to get out of reach of the telegraph and the interviewer and hold aloof from political events centering in Washington.

Africa can still offer a wilderness to the tired man, but not as easily as in the days of Livingstone, who was lost to the world for many years. In Livingstone's day the African continent was known to civilized man only along its margin and here and there where some venturesome explorer had penetrated to the interior. The region which was the scene of Livingstone's travels and discoveries and of the labors of his contemporaries, Speke and Burton, is now provided with railway and telegraph, and steamboats ply upon lakes which, when their existence was first announced by the discoverers, the world refused to believe in. It is now possible to travel by rail and boat east and west through the heart of the dark continent from ocean to ocean, and in a north and south direction only about 800 miles of track are wanting to make continuous rail and boat communication between Cairo and the Cape.

Of course the African jungle remains, and there the man who is daring enough can lose himself to all intents and purposes and stay lost if he chooses during the lifetime of at least one generation. In it only fifty years since the dark continent was opened to the white man, and nearly half of that period was given to exploration and map-making as a preliminary to colonizing and the introduction of the white man's methods. Of the millions of natives of Africa the mass are as wild as they were when Livingstone was among them. The work of missionary and teacher has just begun. As for big game, there is enough left to furnish sport for a man who prefers elephant and lion hunting to the customary quiet retirement of a White House graduate. At any rate, in Africa the strenuous Roosevelt need not chafe in inactivity, as he might feel compelled to should he accept the traditional role of an American ex-president.

A War to Push Along.
President Roosevelt's acceptance of the presidency of the International tuberculosis congress, called to meet in Washington in September, again brings to the fore this organized effort to stamp out one of the chief enemies of the race in modern times. This war cannot have too many recruits, and it is getting them from all countries of the world. Instead of being a foreign bore struggle, as was believed not many years ago, the campaign against the "white plague" shows results every year. Study and experiment have given the experts knowledge of the disease, and the mass of the people have ceased to despair at the first appearance of the dread symptoms.

Two important points have been impressed upon the public mind by the successful experiments of doctors made known through the deliberations of congresses and the publications emanating from them. Oxygen is now known to be a curative agent, and it takes in its inactivity construction can be cured. Once knowledge of the first symptoms of the infection can be carried to every adult in the land the ravages of tuberculosis can be reduced to the minimum. One of the objects of associations formed to fight this war is to spread this knowledge broadcast as quickly as possible. When people know the signs they will also avoid contamination. A later but not less important work will be the regular inspection of children and youths and the separation of the healthy from contact with those infected.

A dollar lost is often a dollar made in experience.

Thinks it Saved His Life.

"It gives me pleasure to speak a good word for Electric Bitters," writes Mr. Frank Conlan of No. 436 Houston St., New York. "It's a grand family medicine for dyspepsia and liver complications; while for lame back and weak legs it cannot be too highly recommended." Electric Bitters Regulate the digestive functions, purify the blood, and impart renewed vigor and vitality to the weak and debilitated of both sexes. Sold under guarantee at Barrington Pharmacy. 50c.
