ESKIMOS' THANKSGIVING.

Whale, Seal and Walrus Take the Turkey's Place.
In striking contrast to the joyous and lavish Thanksgiving dinners of American families are the frugal repasts of the natives who live on the coasts of Alaska and who are forced to wage a ceaseless warfare upon the whale, seal and walrus for subsistence.
In gathering materials for their Thanksgiving feast the efforts of the whole household are engaged. A young Alaskan girl will sit on blocks of ice, covered with a few skins, all day, fishing in the face of a bitter wind, with the temperature 60 degrees below zero.
In hunting the seals the young boys locate the openings which keep recent dogs trained for the purpose, harpooning the animals through holes in the ice when they come up to breathe.
Walrus meat is the most highly prized and appetizing part of the Alaskan diet. No feast, Thanksgiving or otherwise, is considered complete without the head, which is thought to be the most delicious part—Lettie's Weekly.

Where the Pumpkin Cake From. It is hardly to be supposed that on that first expression of thanksgiving in this country nor for many years following there was preparation of a menu of the feeding on the day of celebration. And it is quite certain that the viands enjoyed were simply housewives of the list of the articles that each provider possessed.

All people were producers to some extent in the early days, growing their crops in field or garden from seeds brought chiefly from the British Isles. Among such seeds were those of the pumpkin. It was the most favored of which was that of pie, the addition of the pastry making the dish more substantial and satisfying. Apple and other tree fruit culture had not been introduced in this country then and was not, to a supply extent, until much later. Consequently the pumpkin was all the more essential from the desert standpoint—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Oyster's Mission.
The oyster from the tossing sea,
The chivalry, the protesting sea,
Help out a noble plan,
When they respond to the inner "tark."
—gild the inner man.

Mrs. H. M. Hawley, who has been at the Streator Hospital, Chicago, for treatment has so much improved that she was able to come to this village Tuesday and is now at the home of M. E. Bennett.

The Glazier entertainment at the Baptist church Tuesday evening was entirely satisfactory. Ferrante is certainly a master of magic and the mandolin playing was something extraordinary.
The funeral of Dr. C. B. Otis, who died Wednesday of last week, was held at his late residence Friday at 2 o'clock. Rev. J. H. Gagnier, formerly pastor of the Baptist church, conducted the services at the house. G. A. H. members from a Chicago post and Barrington post assisted in the services. At the grave in Evergreen cemetery Lounsbury lodge, A. F. & A. M., was in charge and C. D. Taylor, Past Master of Palatine lodge read the Masonic ritual.

Following "Way Down East" Mr. Denman Thompson, the celebrated, loyal and honored veteran of the stage, will play a brief engagement in his own famous play "The Old Homestead," making his only appearance in the west. He will begin his engagement Sunday Nov. 29, and will continue for three weeks. Every one who contemplates doing Christmas shopping in Chicago should include a visit to McVicker's to see Mr. Thompson. He has passed his 75th birthday recently, but is as hale and hearty as a man of fifty.

A Healthy Family.
"Our whole family has enjoyed good health since we began using Dr. King's New Life Pills, three years ago," says L. A. Bartlet, of Rural Route 1, Guilford, Maine. They cleanse and tone the system in a gentle way that does you good. 25c at Barrington Pharmacy.

Mrs. Singgas John Henry, here's an article on how to carve a turkey. I wish you'd read it and learn not to be so awkward at dinner time in company.
Mr. Singgas—Does it tell where to get the money to buy the turkey with?
Sure Either Way.
"I suppose you are going to thank on Thanksgiving day?"
"Yes," said the man of gentle pathos.
"If I have turkey and things I'll be thankful for them. And if I don't get thankful I am not going to get thankful."—Washington Star.
