WORK

No honorable substitute for work has yet been discovered. Every successful man owes his success to work. The early history of any successful enterprise begins with the word "work." Were everybody to stop working, the world would no longer produce and the people would die of hunger and exposure.

It would be fair to say that 80 per cent of all the people are workers. This 80 per cent represents the law-abiding, honest and thrifty element. These people are busily employed working out their own destinies, and being busy, they become loyal citizens in the communities in which they dwell.

Among the remaining 20 per cent we find those who occupy their time in search of a substitute for work, such as thieving, foisting, blackmailing, counterfeiting, robbery, smuggling, gambling and other illegal substitutes for work. To restrain this 20 per cent of the people from becoming greater in numbers or too successful in their endeavors, the 80 per cent are obliged to pay out millions for police protection, courts, prosecuting attorneys, detectives, judges, jails, prisons, orphan asylums and reformatives.

Once in a while one of the 20 per cent makes good for a short period and his success is alluring to others. Jesse James made good for some time and then stopped a bullet in his heart. Ponzi succeeded for a while and then went to prison. Platters made good hands until overthrown by revenue cutters. Political grafters live well until exposed. And so it goes with all those who endeavor to find a substitute for work.

John D. Rockefeller, Henry Ford and many other successful men started in at $2 a day, and not one of them would be where he is today had he not worked. A small hunchbacked lad, who had a difficult task getting into this country, worked his way up until he became the highest salaried mechanical engineer in the entire United States.

Looking for a substitute that will pay as well as work has been the ruination of many. It will never win any more than a slow horse wins the race. Work wins lasting victories, makes real men, builds homes, erects factories, and makes peaceful communities. Looking for a successful substitute is like prospecting for Captain Kidd's treasures—so many have tried it and failed that work still looks like the best bet for all of us.

CHEAP MOTORING INSURANCE

Of all humanity, motoring humanity is the strangest. Or perhaps it is just the motoring that brings out some of mankind's idiosyncrasies.

A man will buy a car which can make from 75 to 100 miles an hour. He will, at first anyway, pay great heed to its lubrication, its glossy finish and the specklessness of its upholstery. With a sense of himself and his loved ones in mind he will take out insurance covering property damage, liability and accident medical expenses. Then, overlooking the cheapest and most vital insurance of all, he will completely forget the brakes on his car and let them get into such condition that a serious accident is almost inevitable.

Some states are waking up to the fact that worn brake linings are one of the most prolific causes of our huge and needless automobile accident toll, and, after suitable inspections and warnings, are throwing into jail those motorists who still endanger themselves and others by continued brake neglect.

The cost of relining the brakes on a car is small and it takes only a few hours. Every motorist owes it to himself, his family and to other users of the highway to keep his brakes relined.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SPEND

The public has grown weary of the old slogans to the effect "Prices are booming! Buy Now!" etc. But there is more reason for truth in those phrases at present than there has been in a long time.

Recent inflation activities and the change in the gold backing of the dollar, will be the most powerful price stimulant in three years. It really is time to buy now!

Best of all, by buying now, and making such purchases and improvements that you have been putting off, in the most dramatic stage of the war against unemployment and distress and at the same time secure the greatest return on your dollar—more than a generation.

A dollar spent for some improvement means a dollar teaching life's lives of a number of people.

It may be a long time before you will have the opportunity to get work done as cheaply as now. The price structure is abnormally low. It is lower than even the intensest depression justifies. As demand increases, the rate of climb will be sharply accelerated.

Remember too, that providing jobs is better than charity.

A tramp sign painter, jittingney through Tonkawa, Okla. won the admiration of the editor of the News by just one little idea he had painted on the side of his car. It read: "If it doesn't pay to advertise your business, then advertise it for sale."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

By National Editorial Association
(Special to The Review)

Washington, May 24.—Relations of the president with congress are comparable to the old days when a clever hand was needed at the reins to steer the most out of a spirited and sometimes balky team of horses. Mr. Roosevelt is crowding opportunity to its utmost of possible achievements. As a good transfer he knows full well that the house, with its heavier democratic majorities, will have a steady influence on the most temperamental senate. The type of democratic chairmans is that the administration wagon will go down the rough highway with a minimum of loss and bumps for its legislative cargo. It is generally admitted that marked opposition to the administration is concentrated in minority or factions of disgruntled democrats would be unavailing. As illustrative of the difficulty of congress this apt comment, privately expressed by a republican senator, hits the mark. "I suppose it is difficult to send up a request some day to repeal the law of gravitation, we will go ahead and do it."

The democrats apparently believe in the former school of "making hay while the sun shines" while recognizing the temporary character of the many measures dealing with an emergency situation. It is difficult to see how they will quickly note the precautionary steps the bill now in power. The temporary relief pills now covering the extension of the president's powers at the expiration of the two-year period. Inquiry shows that the democrats do not want to take a chance on a dissolution which might occur in event the republicans should regain control of the legislative body.

Corn Planting Far Behind

About two per cent of Illinois corn planting had been completed up to May 19, according to a report from the federal department of agriculture. Less than one per cent of corn planting has been done in the southern part of the state. Floods have caused considerable damage in the southern part of the state.

Field work has made little or no progress since May 1 due to almost constant rain. The condition of small grains and grass crops has shown some improvement. Winter wheat is showing signs of coming out of the ground in some sections. The condition of small grains and grass crops has shown some improvement.
