Engineers Advise Improvements for Local Water Plant

The Light Iron Works, which is supervising the construction of the water plant, has advised the Board of Public Works that the water plant should be improved.

The main streets of Japan's cities may be named Showadorf, Marumouchi, Ginza, Moto-machi. They are then executed in the "modern style of architecture with artistically arrayed merchandise."

Restaurants and hotels, not to be omitted, have sent corps of men to Paris, London, Vienna and Rome to study, improve upon and combine with Japanese ingenuity the gustatory delights of the western world.

Out from Tokyo, the excellent government railway lines reach in all directions. And here again the Japanese have scored a triumph.

English has become the second language with the Japanese—on trains, ships or wherever travelers gather, for English is a compulsory course in all Japanese middle schools and most colleges.

Waldemuller Map First to Bear America's Name Map-making received a new impetus with the discovery of America. Each returned explorer, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, brought tales of a new found land which caused many changes and alterations.

On the "Mercurator Projection" which in modified form is still in use today. There was the Waldemuller map of 1507, the first to bear the name of America. It was lost for centuries until discovered by a German library in 1907, by an American professor.

Oath Taken by Graduates. The following adaptation of this oath is taken by graduates of the College of the City of New York: "We will never bring disgrace to our city by any act of dishonesty or feigning contraries in the ranks; we will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the city, both alone and with many; we will reverence and obey the city's laws and do our best to incline a like respect and reverence to those about us who are prone to annul them and set them at naught; we will strive unceasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty; and thus, in all these ways, we will strive to transmit this city not only not lost, but greater, better and more beautiful, than it was transmitted to us."

Japan an Age-Old Empire of Countless Paradoxes

Many people think of Japan in terms of gayly painted fans, picturesque structures with upturned eaves, the enigmata, the shrines and the everlasting natural grandeur of Mount Fuji.

Japan is an empire of paradoxes. It is ancient and modern. It is tiny and tremendous. It is carefree yet grimly determined. It is a land of modern factories, of tea rooms and telephones, of Twentieth Century country and latter day bustle and efficiency.

The main streets of Japan's cities may be named Showadorf, Marumouchi, Ginza, Moto-machi. They are then executed in the "modern style of architecture with artistically arrayed merchandise."

Indian Magic Is Used to Bring North Wind

When the Cree Indians, of the James Bay region of northern Canada, tie a bunch of birch bark ribbons to a dog's tail and set the bark on fire, it is not done in deliberate gloom to cause the animal pain, but in one of the most spectacular "magical" employments by these Indians as a means of conjuring up a north wind, according to an anthropologist of the Catholic University of America.

After a thaw a north wind is considered especially desirable because it causes a crust to form over the snow and makes it easy to watch the movements of wild animals and to capture them.

The Cree are scarcely more considerate of their children than of their animals when a north wind is at stake, for another of the magics employed for this purpose consists of sending a naked small boy forth into the cold to defy the wind god. A milder method is to go out and swing "bull-roverars" and other devices that make sounds simulating winds.

But should any of all of these three methods fail the Indian need not be discouraged, for there are many more "magics" he can try before deciding that boreas does not intend to respond to his supplications.—Detroit Free Press.

Wishing Pool Heards Coins

There is still one spot in the United States where Americans throw their money away. A crystal clear pool in New Mexico may be time be filled with pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters that somebody didn't want. It is the famous wishing well of Carlsbad, where a coin tossed in the water is supposed to bring enough good luck to last a lifetime.

The tradition was launched a number of years ago, soon after the Carlsbads were made a national monument, and the bottom of the pool is already well covered with coins. The government makes no effort to recover the money, and the pool serves destined to hold ultimately a young fortune.

Soot Checks Heat

Soot is a black substance formed by combustion or disintegration from fuel in combustion rising in fine particles, and adhering to the sides of the chimney or pipe conveying the smoke; strictly the soot, chiefly of carbon, which colors smoke and is the result of imperfect combustion. Roughly speaking, the heating surface loses about one-eighth of its heat-transmitting power for each one-eighth of an inch of soot.

Harrison Born in Log Cabin

Benjamin Harrison was another of the Presidents born in a log cabin. His father was an elder of the Presbyterian church, and the "sweet Christian character" of his mother, "left a permanent mark upon her children." The future Chief Executive was a Sunday school superintendent at one time.

Later he taught a large Bible class. As the nation's chief he conducted the religious practices of earlier years, family prayer, grace before meat, Scripture reading and church attendance being the rule.

Kangaroos Live in Trees

The Australian National museum has specimens of a kangaroo that lives in trees. Its habitat is the dense forest of northeast Queensland. The animal probably has developed the habit of making its home in trees because of the density of the jungle and the absence of food on the ground.

Kangaroos have larger and stronger forelimbs than the ordinary Australian kangaroo; their hind legs are smaller and their tails longer. They can jump from great heights, land upright on their feet, and run one description in the press, "hop off without even the merest grunt of complaint." They run up a rope like sailors and slide down tails first with incredible facility.—Detroit Free Press.

May Be a Myth to Some

The "seven-year-itch" is a myth, says a doctor. Not to anybody who has ever had it.—Exchange.

ON AN AVERAGE WASHDAY YOUR SOAP COSTS ABOUT 5c YOUR POWER COSTS 3c THERE'S a washday bargain you may not fully realize because it isn't usually price-tagged. It's the electricity you use to run your washing machine. The power that swishes all the dirt out of clothes in the tub and wrings them out for the line costs just a fraction over a penny an hour in the average northern Illinois home. Less than 3 cents' worth of electricity takes all the hard work out of washday. PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS
