Counterfeit Money

The person who accepts counterfeit money is stuck with it unless he immediately passes it on to some one else. A bank will not knowingly accept counterfeit money, but if it is presented for change or deposit and deposited, the bank will confiscate it and make a report to a representative of the Treasury department.

Many Small Boats Dot Red Sea

The Red Sea is dotted with show, tiny sailing boats manned by native crews that engage in every kind of maritime adventure from ferrying ducks to Mexico to transporting sugar surreptitiously. There is no shipping record of their departures and arrivals. Navigating them among the coral reefs that will slice the hull like a knife, is dangerous.

India World in Itself

India, representing every stage in man's religious, political and artistic growth, is a world in itself. It is a land of contrasts, of contrasts and contrasts dot the land. The Buddha, who was the Ganges, India's method of burial, are interesting. The wealth of the relative can be judged by the wood burned, due to its scarcity.
