Calling of Special Session Is Boost for Relief Funds

Sufficient Money Raised for Needs in Lake County Through September

Were it not for the fact that Governor Homer's special bill of special session of the Illinois general assembly, the attention by the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission to Lake County for September would have been $200,000 less than what actually was available. It was stated today by A. L. H. Rogers, chairman of the Lake County Emergency Relief Commission.

In reviewing the situation with respect to Lake County, Mr. Rogers stated that $85,000 more was required to meet emergency relief needs during September. The commission's budget, however, was limited to that which was available to it. It was stated that it could raise only $44,070 available for this month.

Provisional Emergency Help

When Governor Homer, Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the commission, and leaders in the general assembly, including Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, Mr. Rogers agreed to call a special session for emergency relief of emergency relief. The federal government would provide further immediate help in Illinois, pending passage of additional state funds by legislative action.

As a result of this action, the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission was able to make available funds sufficient to meet the emergency relief needs of Lake county for September.

The continuance of emergency relief in Lake county is dependent upon the passage of prompt emergency relief legislation at the coming special session, said Mr. Rogers. "Like other counties of the state we are working to reduce our relief loads whenever possible, and we will try to do so, but we still have a large problem before us which is essential to the health and welfare of our people to give our needy families the necessities of life."

Furry Mink Operates Its Own Cold Storage Plant

The mink is one animal which can refute the claims of vegetarians—it is America's pre-eminent exponent of an entirely carnivorous diet—and it is not particular whether it dines on chicken, duck or clams on the half shell. When none of these courses are available, fish, frogs, squirrels, rabbits or a fat muskrat is relished by this meat gourmet.

Termed also mink, vision, water vessel and least otter, the mink operates its own cold storage plant. Not content with enough for one gory feast, the bloodthirsty animal frequently kills far beyond its immediate desires for food and stores the surplus in pockets in its den during the winter, according to old trappers.

For the farmer or sportsman who is endeavoring to propagate waterfowl, poultry or game birds, there is only one good mink—and that a dead one. While the animal destroys many mice, it has been listed as a neighbor in wild life or agricultural communities. What damage it can accomplish with a henhouse or game bird rearing area within a few minutes is terrific. Instances are cited by a publication of the University of Michigan, which describes the diets of predatory animals, of 17 Plymouth Rock chickens being killed by a mink in one night. Another case cited is that of a farmer who lost 19 ducks and 37 chickens.

Red and Green Snow
Snow in the Arctic regions often appears red or green due to the small microscopic plants which live in it.

The survey included Bait Creek and Calmer, De-Plains and North Branch Chicago rivers, and their tributaries. It was made at the request of the Cook county stream advisory committee, a group appointed by the board of county commissioners and board of forest preserve commissioners. Every foot of the 700 miles of streams was inspected during the course of the study which required approximately 100 days.

The highly polluted character of the streams now is suggested by the fact that 822 outlets from municipalities, institutions and private dwellings which discharge untreated sewage into the streams were found. In addition to this there are 2498 drainage outlets for storm water emptying into the streams.

At some points the streams have been used for dumping garbage. This was indicated by the abundance of rubbish which contained thousands of milk bottles, empty cans and other debris. The effect of pollution on aquatic life was shown by an abundance of fish found at different points in the water.

Two-Year Survey of Cook County Stream Pollution Completed

Sanitary engineers of the state department of public health recently completed what is believed to be the most extensive stream pollution survey ever conducted in the United States. This project involved the inspection and study of 700 miles of streams in Cook county and brought together a volume of information. Practical application of recommendations based upon the survey findings would facilitate the waters in these streams for watering domestic stock and for other useful purposes.

The streams are now too highly polluted for fish and other aquatic life and the water cannot be used safely for bathing or for domestic stock. Some 75 per cent of the stream mileage studied borders upon the Cook county forest preserve lands, the abandonment of pollution would make available a wonderful recreational outlet for millions of people.

The results of this study are being made available to the very doerstep of every citizen of Cook county. A half million people of Illinois, a place which has the reputation of being a health resort, would make outdoor sports.

The survey included Bait Creek and Calmer, De-Plains and North Branch Chicago rivers, and their tributaries. It was made at the request of the Cook county stream advisory committee, a group appointed by the board of county commissioners and board of forest preserve commissioners. Every foot of the 700 miles of streams was inspected during the course of the study which required approximately 100 days.

Started "Vates for Women"

A chance, sneering remark by a New York state legislator was the turning point for Susan B. Anthony, which turned this young school teacher from crusading in the interest of liquor control to a campaign for equal suffrage for women. Miss Anthony had presented a petition for liquor control at the state legislature in Albany. There were 28,000 signatures to the petition. "Who are all these signers? Nobody but women," the legislator in question remarked. That expression, "nobody but women," turned Miss Anthony's attention from temperance work to the new cause, suffrage for women. The millions of the sex discrimination first had begun to ramble in her mind some years before, when she was given her first teaching position at $10 a month, while men received $40 for the same work—Washington Star.
