All you have to do is read the paper. You don't need to know anything more about Sam than that in order to place him in his class. The teacher who raised his hand in the Black Hole, isn't it? Yes, it was the teacher who raised his hand in India. Why didn't they go down and stay away from a country that treated them like that? They have so much trouble because the boys don't want them there. Why do they stay there when they are not wanted in other people's country? That from 10-year-old Richard knows him. Give the children a chance to ask the questions. You do the answering for awhile. Help them to ask the questions in their own way.

DERING

number of motor accidents shows a decided increase, and individual care on the part of motorists is necessary to insure a greater degree of safety on the roads and highways.

Early twilight and the tendency of motorists to keep windows closed, together with the fact that fog-fog-hall signals are conditions which easily can be met with individual care in driving. Allowing plenty of time for applying the home and use of mechanical or hand signals when the course of the car is changed is important to safe motoring in the fall.

Bird Lore

An interesting paper on the "Wings and Tails of Southern Birds" was read by Mrs. Helen Porter, was read at the regularly monthly meeting of the Barrington Bird club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elden Gierke Tuesday evening. A few years ago Mrs. Porter spent several months in the tropics where she studied the habits and life of many birds. She has a large collection of bird skins and a full of information concerning the habits of many different and curious birds of the tropics, along with an account of the particular surroundings in which each bird is found. In the absence of the speaker, the paper was read by the club president.

Two interesting readings were also given, the first, "The Unknown Bird," by Miss Betty Schneider, and the second, an "amazing dissertation" on the life of the woodpecker, by Vernel Jepson.
