Peggy Shane

THE STORY

A pretty young girl, Peggy Shane, was seen in a taxi cab in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on the morning of the 22nd of November, 1933. She was wearing a dark coat and a hat, and was carrying a bag. She was seen by a man who was driving a taxi cab, and he recognized her as the girl who had been seen in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on the morning of the 22nd of November, 1933.

If this were so, then she was not Rocky's wife. Rocky's wife was some other forlorn wail. In her frenzy she pictured this other woman as a victim of the same fate as Rocky's wife. She was walking through the streets, looking for a Mrs. Du Val that never came.

The shapen and shadowing in the room were one of its members, Mrs. H. W. Dvorak, carried home third prize in the flower arrangement contest. Her exhibit was a wicker basket containing brown and yellow button chrysanthemums and red tulle sweet berries.

She tossed all night, not quite dreaming waking nightmares. Down she rose with a painfully contracted heart and knelt down before the picture of Rocky.

In his pictured eyes she tried to read the truth about her relationship to him. He had grown so familiar to her that she could not believe that she had never seen the real man. Even though her mind reeled, she could not see anything that went beyond that silver frame, she still knew that image so well.

"You must be," she whispered. "Fate could not be so kind as to give you to me only in make-believe."

She crawled back under the covers and tried to embrace her. She awoke to find Mrs. Du Val standing beside her bed. Mrs. Du Val looked anxious, and she knew that she had something wrong with her. Her head felt hot and unsteady.

"It is nothing," said Mrs. Du Val, "but you must stay in bed. You will be all right."

For the next few days Doris lay in bed, trying to embrace her. She was the subject of her supposedly approaching motherhood. Mrs. Du Val, like many women, was a little touchy about her supposed approaching motherhood.

Once she took a daisy from the bunch of flowers which Mrs. Du Val had brought her, and pulling the leaves near her bed, and pulling the leaves of the familiar ritual, "the loves me, he loves me not."

"I suppose I really am slightly out of my mind," she thought. "I figured the girl who had been seen in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on the morning of the 22nd of November, 1933."

"I, L. V. to D. M. May 10th, 1932." D. M. That was Doris. She did not yet know what her maiden name had been. And H. L. V. was now panic overwhelmed her. Rocky's initials were R. D. V. She had not married to Rocky. She must be married to the man in the cab.

Wormed Mustard Bitter
The seeds of the wormed mustard are very bitter, and, on account of their disagreeable taste, many kinds of live stock will refuse to eat chow made from grain containing an appreciable quantity of these seeds. Wormed mustard is a common impurity of grain, stalks and linseed.

Cook With Gas
Quick, easy, economical. Even though you live beyond the city gas is now available to you. All the advantages of cooking with GAS—the modern bottled gas—can be had in the place to find it.
