50 Federal Relief Men Dress Up Elia Township School

Project Calls for Grading, Landscaping and General Repairing

Work on the Elia township high school was started this week under the supervision of the local federal relief administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, newly appointed to his position in charge. All relief men in Vernon, Fremont and Elia townships have been on the job for several days. The work included the grading of the driveway and several repairs.

The new federal relief administrator has as its job to provide regular wages for unemployed workers who are willing to do the work. To this end, the federal administrator of public works in the federal relief project is used to pay the relief men for the work that is being done.

The Elia township high school project calls for fifty men and the work will be finished by February 15. The labor on this job is paid in kind. Laborers are on the job for a thirty hour week. The men on the job are paid one month for every hour they work. The men have to work for a month before they can be paid.

The men for the project do not have to be residents of the Elia township. The work will be done by men from all over the state. The work will be done by men from all over the state. The work will be done by men from all over the state.

Lake County Farms May Grow Tomatoes for Extra Revenue

Large Cannine Firm Seeks Contract for 5000 Acres in Chicago Area

Lake county farmers are planning a sidecrop of tomatoes next year to supplement their income from dairy herds and grains, according to H. C. Gilberson, farm adviser of the Lake County Farm Bureau, who conferred with John Hall, eastern representative of the Campbell Canning company of Camden, N. J., last week relative to the planting of 5000 acres of tomatoes in the county next year. The Campbell company maintains a branch canning factory in Chicago which, if the tomato project for the Chicago area goes through, will be enlarged. Mr. Gilberson reported that the Campbell company wishes to get 5000 acres of tomatoes grown in the Chicago area next year, limiting Lake county to 300 acres.

Approximately 100 acres of the Lake county farms were agreed to at the first meeting. THE STORY

CHAPTER I—A pretty young woman with a serene smile and a sparkling personality and a big heart for a moment at a party in the city. The story of the party is told in the following paragraphs.

The party was a success. The young woman who was the center of attraction was the daughter of a wealthy man. She was a perfect example of a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to college for a degree in education. She was a perfect example of a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to college for a degree in education.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

She tried to be rational. There must be some way that H. L. V. could be happy. Her husband's name was not really her name. She had never seen him before. She had never seen him before. She had never seen him before.

There were several reasons. First, if she were married to Rocky she could be married to the man in the club. Second, she liked Rocky's picture. She was half way in love with him. And there was no one else.

How many days passed in this way she did not know, but one morning when she was beginning to feel better physically, if not mentally, she became conscious of great excitement residing beyond her room. There was banging and banging in doors in the hallway. Mrs. Du Val came hurrying in. Her small eyes were shining with joy behind her round glasses.

"You must not excite yourself, Doris," she exclaimed. "You're feeling almost well, are you not, Doris?"

"Yes, yes. I feel well enough to get up."

"No, no. Not yet. Do not get excited, Doris," she repeated.

Mrs. Du Val sat herself down in a chair and watched Doris eat her breakfast. Evidently she was bored with news which she was forced to tell Doris.

"I have for you a surprise," said Mrs. Du Val.

"That ought to make me feel quite well," said Doris, trying to be optimistic and to look cheerfully up at her.

"She knew that this wasn't true. She could hardly bear to think of something new happening. Things were complicated enough. Yet she felt that she must know. What if?"

But Mrs. Du Val was talking her head. She had made up her mind about something. She came close to Doris, bent over her affectionately, kissed her warm brow.

"Some day soon, you must prepare to see my boy Rocky," she said contentedly. "That was all I meant to tell you. I have heard from him."

All the color seemed to have been flung out of Doris' face. Something sickening stirred within her. Reprehensibly, she looked at Mrs. Du Val.

"Ah, it shocks you. But he loves you?" Mrs. Du Val's firm cheeks were against her hair. "Do not worry—so far for your husband. He loves you."

Some time after Mrs. Du Val had gone Doris lay there without stirring. She had closed her eyes. And Mrs. Du Val, full of kind discernment and left her. She was in the maze of worry, nothing quite as reprehensible as this had happened.

The man she was supposed to be married to—a man she had never seen—was on his way to her now.

She sat up suddenly. Mrs. Du Val had not told her everything. That chance which had come over Mrs. Du Val's face when she first spoke of the surprise! It meant something! It meant that she feared Doris was not well enough to hear it—the truth. She slipped her feet into her slippers and got to the door, her heart beating with suppressed excitement.

"Estelle," she called softly down
