1,000 Indian Tribes in Country Ahead of White

It is estimated that there were up to 1,000 Indian tribes in the time of the discovery of America, and the number of Indians is estimated at more than a billion.

The land lying both north and south of the Great Lakes, from Mississippi to the Atlantic, was inhabited by the Algonquians, including the Delaware and the Micmacs. The Iroquois, comprising six nations of Mohawks, Oneida, Cayuga, Seneca, Onondaga and Tuscarora, inhabited what is now New York state and southern Ontario. South of the Algonquian on the Carolina to Texas Arkansas, were the Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws and Seminoles.

The Indians of the great plain included the Chees, Chipewas, Ojibwas in the Northwest, the Ojibwas and Wichitas in the East, the Sioux, Assiniboin and Dakotas in the Center, among the Pacific Indians of the south-west of the Apaches and Navajos.

The California Indians or Hias included the Yaptos, Yumats, Matsin. In the Northwest and British Columbia were the Hantons, Nantons and Flatheads. In the North Pacific area were the Solowegs and Chinkooks—Detroit News.

Royal Relations of King Edward VII of England married to Alexandra, a daughter of King Christian IX of Denmark. Her sister Durnar was his son, the murdered czar Nicholas II, was a second cousin to present English King, George V. Family resemblance between the couple was remarkable.
