

The Man From Yonder

do this or that with him? He could not interest her despite his persistent efforts, and now another element was injected into the situation. When he encountered Ben Hill out that afternoon in friendly conversation with Dawn it required all his resourcefulness to retain a show of self-control. Inwardly he seethed with a hatred which now had the element of jealousy for an embittered ally. He hated Ben Elliott with all his soul and mingled with his passion for Dawn McManus was a species of hate as well. He hated her for her cleverness, for her sweetness, for her power to attract young men to her.

But after he had stopped clearly, Ben looked just a bit further forward. "It's a rotten deal," she said in a quavering manner. "Why, she's only a girl, Brandon; and the boy, he's as clean as a hound's tooth. It's rotten!" Brandon shrugged and looked away. "I don't care to be mixed up in this," she went on. "I don't fancy playing any such game." Defiance was there, and it struck the man's temper. His dark eyes swung back to focus on her face and about his lips was the beginning of a malicious smile. "You refuse?" "I do, what?" He leaned quickly against the desk edge. "One word to the Immigration people and you go back to Canada. Do you think they forget... the Canadian?" Lydia blinked rapidly and bit her lips. "You wouldn't turn me up?" she said sharply. Brandon leaned back, laughing comfortably. "Wouldn't I, though! Wouldn't I? If you refuse... Try it, my friend, and then try Canada's money. You've been from their wonder... what'll you do then?" "That," he said easily, "is distinctly my own affair."
