PUBLICITY IS PUBLIC FUND SAFEGUARD
Judging by the number of investigations that are being made of the expenditures of our state and national officials there is a need for the development of an informed and intelligent citizenship.

State laws require or permit county clerks, city clerks and other official tax-paying bodies to publish statements of all claims authorized and ordered paid. The purpose of the laws is to acquaint the interested citizens with the expenditures of the various units, to advise them as to just how and for what the tax money is being spent.

These are among the wisest laws ever enacted from the standpoint of safeguarding public funds and insuring them against waste, extravagance and misuse. When the controlling body knows that it must account publicly for every cent it spends and that every citizen is to be given the opportunity of scrutinizing every item of expenditure, there is a natural tendency to be careful and cautious in the appropriation of funds.

Without any reflection upon anyone, we undertake to say that many unwise expenditures would not have been made had the governing bodies known that the full glare of publicity would be turned upon their monthly claims.—News, Fairbury, Neb.

SAFETY AWAY FROM HOME

The family of a prominent motor car and airplane manufacturer has been sent to England to save its members from the threats of kidnapers. The attention of the lowest denizens of the underworld had been shown in a number of averted attempts in recent months and it is said to have been on the advice of police that the manufacturer sent his family out of the country for protection.

There is a lot to think about in that situation. It contains a compliment for England, where people of all degrees are safe, but nothing pleasing to Americans in its intimation that persons of any means are increasingly unsafe in the United States.

The worst phase of the American crime problem is dramatized in this flight of a family from home to seek safety among strangers.—Journal-World, Lawrence, Kansas.

EDITORIAL SHORTS

Over at Chanute last week a man who had never smoked, a cigar, drank a glass of beer or worn a necktie, died at the age of 101. It's a little difficult to decide if the esteemed citizen really did live to a ripe old age, or if it just seemed that way.

The hotel room cards, reading "Stop! Have You Forgotten Anything?" have caused many a guest to chase back after another hotel towel and a bar of soap, notes the Altoona Tribune.

It might help a little bit if all our readers would understand that a journalist is not a detective, a policeman or a moral censor.

The fact that the earth was created in six days proves definitely that it wasn't a government relief job.

And does it necessarily follow that homely wit is that which the old man tries out on his wife and kids before telling it to the Lions.

A reformer is a person who wants you to let his conscience be your guide.

DO YOU KNOW ILLINOIS?

By EDWARD J. HUGHES, Secretary of State.

The secretary of state of Illinois is the state librarian ex-officio. The state library and archives division under his jurisdiction contain much information concerning your state. Any questions which are of particular interest to readers and which are not covered in this series will be answered immediately. Address all communications: Edward J. Hughes, Secretary of State, Public Information Department, Capitol, Springfield, Illinois.

Q. Who was the territorial representative in congress who introduced the bill petitioning for the admission of Illinois to the Union? A. Nathaniel Pope.

Q. Who was the first governor of Illinois? A. Shadrach Bond (1773-1830) served as governor from 1818 to 1822.

Q. Who was Edward Coles? A. Second governor of Illinois (1822-1826). He led the fight against proposed amendments to the constitution which would have made Illinois a slave state. He freed his own slaves when he brought with him from Virginia to Illinois in 1819.

Q. What are the qualifications necessary for candidacy for the supreme court? A. A candidate must be at least 30 years of age, a citizen of the United States, a member of the bar, a resident of Illinois for the five years next preceding his election, and a resident of the district which he seeks to represent.

Q. How many judges sit on the supreme court bench? A. Six.

Q. What is the tenure of office of a supreme court justice? A. Nine years.

Q. What is the tenure of office of the clerk of the supreme court? A. Six years.

Q. What is the jurisdiction of the Illinois supreme court? A. Original jurisdiction in cases relating to revenue, in mandamus and habeas corpus, and appellate jurisdiction in all other cases.

Q. How many judges must concur in a decision of the Illinois supreme court? A. Three.

Q. Who is the chief justice of the Illinois supreme court? A. Norman L. Jones.

The new deal has gone to bat twice—constitution pitting.

First time up came a fat strike-out, when nine unimpe justices of the United States supreme court decided that NIRA oil control was not legal.

For the second time, the new deal scored a practical home run, but a moral two-bagger. Five of nine unimpe justices decided that congress went all the way when it knocked the 100-cent gold dollar into the present 59.08-cent paper dollar. Four disagreed.

But this meant that the rates were stretched when the government repudiated its own written contract to pay holders of government bonds in 100-cent gold dollars.

A civil service reserve similar to the military reserve system, to be used by the government in an emergency, is a possibility for the United States. Plans are being given over carefully by officials of the government of Commerce Daniel C. Roper. Under the program as now being considered, qualified college students would be hired to take civil service examinations.

With Hays Long now battering away from the left and Mr. Hoover from the right, the chances of breaking down Mr. Roosevelt's political strength seems on paper, at least, to be sufficient to prevent to cause the political experts in the administration's camp to stop, look, and listen. They might figure out whether the reform legislation is needed just now, whether defeat must go on and then increase the number of unemployed, or whether to cause the Hoovers and the Longs and

CHAPTER IX

IT WAS Saturday night and Tincup was dancing. In the Old party hall a violin, a cornet and a piano made music for the scores who had paid their fee and danced in the glaring, barren room. And among them a cymonator for all eyes, went Ben Elliott and Dawn McManus.

It was the first time many of the townspeople had had a real good look at Dawn since her return; it was Ben Elliott's initial encounter with a social function. It was their first appearance in public together. Curiosity prompted much the rock craning because Dawn, the daughter of Denny McManus, always had been a conspicuous figure, but now her features were heightened by a flush and both men and women forgot that she was known chiefly as the daughter of a murderer.

The two were apparently having the time of their lives. Ben talked, how he talked! He talked of this and that, of other things, but he felt he must talk and keep talking of impersonal matters or he would find himself blurted words of his own. He had a good time. He felt that unless he kept talking of trivial things he would find himself about to say something that he would never say.

"You are the most lovely thing that ever breathed and I love you, Ben," she said, looking at him. So he setled upon every subject that came into his head eagerly, almost desperately.

"I never follow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the foot (tw). At first I was a little leary about the new bookkeeper, but I had him in the mill a couple of days, see, you can't let a man who's brought a high grade office and do work like this."

"I brought him in and told him I needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little leary. I had a boy out there who was a little light figured. He didn't get on with the work. I had a little boy named John Martin, his name is— that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take your job with the understanding that he was going to support you in a lot of things for a long time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I ever seen. Said he wasn't afraid to be suspected."

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little room. I got a room for a bed and I like him a lot."

"The dance ended and they walked out. Ben Elliott, who had been occupied with one another that they did not notice the bush that had fallen over the place, nor the woman who had entered, until she had crossed the floor and stopped before them.

"Liddy stopped just within the threshold and shook the light snow from her fur coat and that gesture was enough to cause words to die upon the lips of Ben Elliott. Liddy, here! Liddy, from Thirty-Seven, invading this place where decent people, where good men and good women and little children, were assembled."

"The woman did not hesitate. Head up, intently, she came and stood before Ben Elliott. Her eyes, that were as blue as the sky, were fast on Dawn's face. She was smiling, but her eyes were as hard as steel. "Liddy, here! Liddy, from Thirty-Seven, invading this place where decent people, where good men and good women and little children, were assembled."

"He did not stop talking until the woman's shadow fell upon him. Then he looked up, saw her, and rose. He rose, because a woman was standing there, evidently waiting to speak to him. He did not know her; had never seen her before. He had no time to observe and Judge. He would have risen, anyhow, because he was naturally courteous to women. He did more than rise. He even bowed just a trifle when Ben Elliott saw that her eyes were on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted toward her face, that she was smiling, but under such circumstances, a young man does not do that. There are some things so embarrassing that words fail."

"Send Red." He signed his name and sat back, brows drawn and after a time nodded indistinctly. Out at the foot of Ben Elliott went a man who had been wearing a dammy. It was a situation such as he had never dreamed of facing. Dawn had heard and seen and... Ben Elliott saw that her eyes were on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted toward her face, that she was smiling, but under such circumstances, a young man does not do that. classified her, put her in the shameful place which was hers. A great flash of bewilderment swept into his face. "Why understand! Maybe you think you can abuse a girl like that and get away with it in this town, but not while she's in my house, you can't!"

A wave of humiliation overwhelmed Ben. "What could a man do in a situation like this? What could he say? He was fustered, out-matched. Nothing in his experience stood him in need to meet such an emergency as this one.

"Why... Why, this is an outrage," he began weakly. But his fighting spirit, surged upward, steadied him. "I've never seen you in my life! I don't even know what you're talking about! This is either a mistake..."

"Mistake!" the woman cried shrilly. "Don't try to get away with that! I suppose it does surprise you to have me here and you haven't seen me since I got out of sight, judging me and—"

"Stop!" he thundered. "Stop it, stop it!" For an instant his conviction checked her. Movement was going on about them, people shifting to see and hear better, one man mounting a chair. The crowd by the doorway had turned back to the daughter of a murderer.

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself!" him after watching Dawn McManus scurry down the stairs. But Elliott was unaware of all this.

"This is some outrageous plot!" he said evenly, and so low that only Ben ever saw him could hear. "I'm done deliberately to give me a black eye before these people here! You're a party to a filthy scheme, whoever you are!"

"The man who had been wearing a dammy, it was a situation such as he had never dreamed of facing. Dawn had heard and seen and... Ben Elliott saw that her eyes were on him. Lapsed is not the same as a political apostate. It is a territory, rather extensive, with no precise limits in the southern part of the United States. It includes in parts of Sweden, Norway and northwestern Russia in Europe. A geographical name of a Mephitic race, the name of a band of adjacent parts of Russia, characterized by very short stature and curly hair. The word is used to describe a man who is not a native of his own country, but who has been adopted by another country. They have been settling among the Poles and Ukrainians, whose mode of life they assume.

Bronchos
Meet on Pirate
Court Friday
in Final Game

Unpublished Title is Bronchos
Goal; Capacity Crowd
Expected at Game

The wind-up of Northport conference basketball competition for the season Friday night will bring out the outstanding game of the entire season—the Barrington Broncho-Palatin Pirate tussle at the Palace court to decide the championship of the conference. The Bronchos will be the heavy-weight division.

With the Bronks out to gain unopposed claim to the title and the Pirates fighting for a second championship, a real battle is expected. The local high school quintet clinched a share in the title in the second half of the conference victory on a 12 game schedule at the expense of Warren last week. The Pirates have lost one game while the Bronks have won one. The Bronks to become co-champions. Due to the small seating capacity of the Palatin gym it is expected there will be a long line before the preliminary game starts at 7:30 Friday night.

Although they received a 36 to 19 shooting in the first half of the first meeting at Barrington, the strong Pirate five, with a home floor advantage, will take the court even choices to upset the local team. Headed by Captain Reese and Eddie Hamfield the Pirates have improved greatly in the second half of the conference race, trouncing a Springfield team at their last start.

Coach P. E. Clark's Bronchos can accomplish two things not possible for any other team. They have never done so by winning Friday night. They can become the first local heavy-weight team to ever win an inter-school championship and to go through a conference schedule undefeated. With the school team for the season, they will probably line up with Graham and Fitzer at forward, Conn playing the center position and the Bronks' backcourt jumping center then dropping back to guard with Workman at the other guard.

Coach T. C. Hostford's Ponies can flash all alone in third place in the conference lightweight race by winning over Palatin's lights. The Ponies have won one game and lost three games while the Pirate lightweight have won seven and lost four.

Change District
Tourney Dates;
Bronks Play Tues.

The opening session of the district cage tourney at Crystal Lake will be held on Tuesday, March 5, a day earlier than usual, according to an announcement from D. M. Dwyer, tourney manager.

Barrington high school's Bronchos will meet their first district opponent, Woodstock, at 7 o'clock Tuesday in a basket ball opening night game at Harvard-Plato Court at 6 p. m.; Hampshire-Palatin at 8 p. m.; and Crystal Lake-Unity at 8 p. m. Other first round and also the second round games will be played on Wednesday and Thursday nights with the semi-finals scheduled for Friday evening and the finals, Saturday night.

If the Bronks get by Woodstock they will meet the winner of the Crystal Lake-Unity game on Wednesday at 6 p. m. Should they win they would be in the semi-finals with the prospect of meeting Elgin, a sure semi-finalist. Elgin is rated one of the strongest teams in the state, defeating Quincy, the 1932 state champs, in a tournament downstate during the Christmas holidays.

Church All-Stars to Meet Chicago Red Caps in Cage Game Tonight
A seasonal colored team, the Chicago Red Caps, will meet the Church All-Stars, a picked Chicago team, in a basket ball game at the school gym tonight. The Red Caps are noted for their clever ball handling, blind passing and quick shooting. They are said always to put on a good show. A local team, Beche's Specials will oppose the Piggs from Hammond, Ind. The game will start at 7:15 followed by the Barrington-Lake Zurich girls game.
