AN IDEAL GOVERNMENT

If we were asked to depict an ideal social organization, we would say, off hand, that it would be one under which any able-bodied, intelligent man or woman could always find work at wages sufficient to provide for the necessities of life and lay aside something for old age, and after forty years of work be able to retire on his or her savings.

We think that a government which concentrated on those objectives and on nothing else would come pretty near to being an ideal government. Its corollary functions might well include provision for the security of the thrifty individual's savings, and such regulation of terms and conditions of employment as would at least not impair the worker's chance of living to enjoy the fruits of a life's work, and would protect him on the one hand against unfair competition by the workers of any foreign nation in which a lower standard of living prevails, and on the other hand against exploitation by unprincipled employers.

Such an ideal government would protect every man in his right to keep what he has earned, and as an essential part of that protection, would be administered as economically as possible, in order that the burden of taxation might rest as lightly and as equitably as possible upon all its citizens.

This ideal government would make it its first concern that every child have an opportunity to obtain the best education of which it was capable. If, in spite of that education, it persisted in making a fool of itself as it grew up, we do not believe that is any part of any government's concern.

That is not to say that government should permit the swindler to roam unchecked; it should not tolerate impositions of any kind upon the ignorant and the unwary. But we do not conceive it part of government's business to recompense the victims of their own foolishness and extravagance.

The ideal government would neither pamper its criminals nor allow such social conditions to exist as tend to make crimes against the body politic alluring to the young. It would be a government of few laws, and those restrictive upon individual liberty only as the exercise of that liberty infringes upon the liberties of others. It would be adequately policed and its laws would be rigidly enforced.

We do not expect to see such a government, either in the United States nor anywhere else. We believe that what we have set down represents in large measure what our government is striving for. We think that there are too many people who want government to do a great deal more than the simple essentials which we have outlined, and that progress towards economic recovery is being hampered by too many uplifts having a finger in the pie.—Exponent, Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

DO YOU KNOW ILLINOIS?

BY EDWARD J. HUGHES, Secretary of State.

The secretary of state of Illinois is the state librarian ex-officio. The state library and archives division under his jurisdiction contain much information concerning your state. Any questions which are of particular interest to readers of this paper will be answered immediately. Address all communications: Edward J. Hughes, Secretary of State, Public Information Department, Capitol, Springfield, Illinois.

Q. By what method of survey are Illinois lands marked off?
A. A method provided by congress, 1785, involving the establishment of "principal meridians" running north and south, and "base lines" running east and west.

Q. What are the "principal meridians" of Illinois?
A. The first principal meridian is the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana. The second is west of the center of Indiana extending the entire length of the state. The third is the center of Illinois extending the entire length of the state. The fourth is in western Illinois and Wisconsin extending the entire length of the state.

Q. How many congressional townships?
A. From the principal meridian and the base lines, a region is laid into townships six miles square and the townships numbered. Townships so surveyed are "congressional townships."

Q. For purposes of local government counties are divided into civil townships. These townships are not surveyed.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

"Let Europe step in its own juice. A good war might help business. What do we care if the gold block breaks up?" Those are sentiments expressed by some members of congress as a result of threatening political and economic trouble abroad. Germany may arm. What effect can that have on the United States? Belgium may break from the gold standard, depreciating the currency of other gold countries. Why should that bother us?

War may be a possibility. Hasn't this country learned its lesson? Isn't it isolated and insulated from Europe? The common impression is that by turning toward nationalism in 1933, the United States effectively protected itself against representations from trouble abroad. Did it? Government officials whose business it is to study and analyze those questions offer conclusions they have reached.

Would war abroad mean good times here? You can't take past experience as a guide, say these officials. Conditions are different now than at any time in the past. "If by good, war goods needed for war purposes, European nations would need either cash or credit. Most of them have no credit. Congress has ordered that no new money can be loaned to these debtors until they pay their war debts. Few of them have cash.

Recovery marches on. This is the word from three sources. First, the department of commerce reports its index of industrial production is up by nearly 100 points from a year ago. Second, the department of labor shows 200,000 more persons at work in February than in the previous month, an increase of 2.3 per cent, while pay rolls rose by 7.8 per cent, the second largest gain for the month in 16 years.

Third, the national industrial conference board tells of a moderate brightening in its composite picture of business and industrial conditions. Although the index of the Southwest did not have so much as we are familiar with, they made use of a fairly satisfactory substitute. Points of interest in the five billion dollar works program: Many of the new law lands, the farm-out areas of the east, and in some of the largest cities, federal agents are buying land or taking options. Many of the rural purchases are of land similar to large parts of the 165,695,000 acres now in the national domain but there is one difference between the old holdings and the new. Most of the land now in the public domain has never been out of the government ownership since the new laws have been in private hands, in some cases for a comparatively long time, and in others for many generations.

The average is to be $50 a month. Contractors will get an opportunity to bid on much of the business. Work is to get under way gradually over the next few months, with the objective of providing 2,500,000 jobs for persons now on relief rolls. Those jobs are expected to yield useful production, adding to the wealth of the nation.

What happens if the billions are spent, and recovery does not come? Will these workers be turned back on relief? That is anybody's guess. Although the index of the Southwest did not have so much as we are familiar with, they made use of a fairly satisfactory substitute.

Lake Forest

Will Make Debuts Next Winter on Basketball Court

Move Increases Membership of Conference to 12 Schools

Lake Forest and Grant (Fox Lake) high schools have been admitted to membership in the Northwest conference as a result of an organization's annual spring meeting at Palatine two weeks ago. At the meeting, it was voted to invite Lake Forest, a new school from the northwest, to be affiliated to join. Both schools accepted this increasing the conference membership to 12 schools.

Grant of Fox Lake opened only a few years ago and has met conference teams on seven terms in football and basketball. It has about 200 students. The two schools will not be included in the football program next fall but will enter conference competition with the beginning of basketball.

Changes Coach Schedule The most important change in the new set-up will be in basketball. The old method of drawing up the schedule called for dropping three teams each year thus giving some schools harder schedules than others. The new plan involving the 12 teams is to have each school play the other one during the season, a total of 11 games. This will iron out all schedule "breaks" as each school meets every other one in the conference. T. C. Hoford of Barrington, head coach of Libertyville and P. C. Egan of Bensenville were selected as the committees to arrange the basketball schedules for the season.

Another important piece of business settled at the meeting was the appointment of a committee to select officials for the conference games. In this way home schools will be relieved of the somewhat difficult task of selecting suitable officials for the various contests.
