Tongues of Insects and Animals Most Efficient Many people imagine that the man's tongue is the most efficient of the world; actually, those of cut animals and insects have it far ahead, according to a writer in the Bios Magazine.

The chameleon's tongue, the eight inches long, is invisible except on the scientific eye of the camera. So quickly does it move, it will pop a popgun, hitting with the tip of its tongue on the bark of a tree and striking them back on the stick up into the owner's nose. Nature forgot to give the snake a tongue as a "feeler" in the dark.

Tests and Independence In 1845, for 1840 years, it was a long controversy of the slavery question, it was, finally, in 1845, in the state of Missouri, that the state should remain its unappropriated and unceded lands that no states not to be formed within its boundaries, and that the United States should not entertain any questions of boundary with foreign countries. It is not more dependent than any other state, in 1845 a resolution was introduced in the legislature providing for the creation of a new state to be called "Jefferson" in the northwest corner of Texas, but no action followed.

Thunderstorms in Bermuda Thunderstorms are very common in Bermuda and occur during a month of the year. They are of short duration, however, and the loss of life and property is exceptional. Occasionally, however, violent thunderstorms do occur.
