SANITY ON THE PRAIRIES

It is refreshing to report that at least one state has managed to avoid the fallacy that the way to create prosperity is to spend billions on credit—credit which must be based on all the savings and wealth, all the prosperity, all the industries, all the earnings and other resources of the

The state is Nebraska, which is described by W. E. Christensen in an article in the New York Herald Tribune entitled "Sanity on the Prairies."

Nebraska has a new $10,000,000 capitol-without a ny of debt standing against it. Nebraska has a splendid highway system—without a single outstanding bond.

Nebraska's state tax, which provides the funds for supporting the state university, four normal schools and all other state activities, has averaged less than two mils per year during the last 10 years.

year during the last 10 years.

Nebraska has no state income tax, no sales tax, no nuisance taxes. The state hasn't one cent of bonded indebtedness. Total bonded debt of its 93 counties, in July, 1934, was but $6,247,000—of which a single county, Douglas, ac-was but $6,247,000—of which a single county, Douglas, ac-counted for $4,500,000, leaving the small sum of $1,700,000 apportioned among the 92 remaining county governments. This sounds like a taxpayers' Utopia, which it is. This not been achieved through magic. Here, according to Mr. Christiansen, is the four-sided plan Nebraska follows: 1. Pay as you go; issue no state bonds and few county honds 2. Reject new forms of taxation. 3. Watch public bonds. 2. Reject new forms of taxabon. 3. Watch public spending and the spenders. 4. Remember that even in these changing times the functions of local government are the same as they were 15 years ago and should cost no more.

The plan is simple. It is workable. It is sound. Ne-braska has led the way toward economic sanity—other states should fall in line.—Gazette, Cape May Court House,

THE MIDDLE WEST

The old pioneer spirit still prevails in that section of the country familiarly known as the Middle West. Within the past twelve months the Middle Westerner faced tremenodds, even stark tragedy. Drouths, dust storms and floods have visited his part of the world with grim shadows that those more faint of heart would have succumbed to with good grace. There were times when he may not have felt like smiling, but at no time did anyone hear the Middle Westerner whine.

Surely every citizen can find a worth-while example in the conduct of their fellow Americans whose homes the conduct of their fellow Americans whose homes were almost blown away, then almost washed away, calamities had enough in themselves but especially discouraging when they followed close upon the heels of a drouth that last-ed almost two years. But the Middle Western men and wo-men are the kind that "can take it." Their ancestors were the hearty followers of the plow who journeyed far into the unknown to establish homes. And once established they were unknown to estatism nomes. And once estatismed they were ready to protect them with courage and determination, believing that a little bad luck now and then only adds spice to life. What matter such trivial things as too much dust or water or the lack of it? This game of living is something beyond the quitters. It requires pioneers to win, and the Middle Westerners have it in their blood.—Times, Ellicott City, Ind.

The battle over the constitution opens as the American Pederation of Labor votes to have its executive council frame a constitutional amendment which would give congress power over labor relationship it to make valid laws for social welfare.

The federation thus takes up the challenge set forth by President Roosevelt when he declared, after the supreme court's NRA decision, that the power of congress over industry is the outstanding problem on which the country must make up its mind in the next five or ten years.
