HOME EDUCATION
 "The Child's First School Is the Family"—Froebel
 Issued by National Kindergarten Assn. 8 W. 40th St. New York

Mother's Pet
JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY
 Mrs. Allen was entering the twins in kindergarten. They were not identical twins. Jimmie was alert, confident and handsome with curly and dark eyes; Jack was big, awkward and plain with mouse colored hair and grey eyes. Jimmie ran lightly ahead, but Jack had to be led into the room. Mother took off his cap and showed him where to stand.
 "You'll find that Jackie can do much," volunteered Mrs. Allen after registering their names. "Jimmie is always been the leader." The latter straightened up with a smirk and Jack hung his head.

The teacher seated the boys across the room, out of hearing, then turned to Mrs. Allen. "How long has Jackie been this way?"
 "Always I guess. He was a homey baby. People never noticed him but exclaimed over Jimmie, who was really beautiful. See how fine-looking he is now! You will notice that Jackie is just overgrown awkwardness, while Jimmie is delicate and sensitive. Jackie understands that he must always give in to Jimmie."
 "I see," said the teacher. "Jackie does not think of himself. If there is only one banana on the plate and Jimmie wants it, Jackie takes an apple."
 "Yes, that's about the way it is," laughed Mrs. Allen. "but Jackie does not mind. He worships Jimmie."
 Later, the teacher seated the twins at a table where some of the children were sorting different colored balls. Jack simply watched Jimmie. The teacher then moved Jack to another table where the boys and girls were moulding clay. "Jackie, you can make a ball with this," she said, and proceeded to make one herself. But he was shy and ill at ease and would not even try. He seemed to have no plans, no ideas, even in play. He had always played contentedly with any toys that Jimmie did not want. Later the teacher captured Jack's attention by placing a bright toy near. He stared it idly; then laid it down and a smaller boy soon carried off the prize.

 A week passed. Jack did as he was told, but will regard to interest and initiative little advance was made. Then one day Jimmie was sick and Jack came alone. During the morning, he found himself beside the phonograph. He put out his hand to start the needle, then looking around, drew back frightened. Apparently, no one was noticing, but, really, the teacher was watching in deep suspense. Jack tried again but drew back. Finally, he got his hand as far as the needle and turned it down.
 Fearing he would scratch the record, the assistant started to leave him, but the teacher put out a detaining hand. "Don't move," she whispered, "he's in the midst of a real awakening. Let him taste the joy of achievement."
 That afternoon, when the others were not noticing, the teacher led Jack to the phonograph and showed him how to use it. Several times she did this. Then, two days later, when Jimmie asked for "The Farmer in the Dell" record, the teacher said, "Jackie, won't you show Jimmie how to put it on?"
 Jack's eyes beamed. He led the surprised Jimmie to the phonograph.
 "This was a real beginning. Jack was soon asked to help other children."
 Naturally, the teacher discussed Jack's case with her principal. "I have tried to get Mrs. Allen to cooperate in bolstering up Jack's initiative but she does not seem to be interested and always says, 'Oh, Jackie was born that way.' I really believe she can not bear to have anyone get ahead of Jimmie. He is her pet."

"It is surprising how many mothers are like her," replied the principal. "Ever since my first years of teaching when I stayed in other people's homes, I have been impressed by the partiality shown for one particular child in the family. How can well-meaning women be so unwise?"

Business Men to Discuss Limit Parking Properties
 Local business men have at requests from A. C. H. village clerk, to attend a night at which time a preliminary hearing will be held. An ordinance regulating parking time is in effect, but the clerk will be submitting to the village board next week a proposal that speed limits and parallel parking permits will be discussed, all the board members have to be in attendance. The ordinance will be made at state aid streets.
 An engineer from the highway office in Elgin is expected to visit Peoria to study the village roads for widening the pavement. Main between Elm and Park village has approximately 100 feet of road that is in need of improving state aid roads. A plan must be proved and these funds allocated before January 1, the bond has been advised.
