OUR BRITISH COUSINS HAVE IT ON US

One advantage of the British system of government is that elections are irregular and unexpected, and are usually held with a minimum of disturbance. For instance, there had been no election there since 1931, and none needed to occur by law until expiration of a five year period. Thus during the depression Great Britain has been free from campaigns and candidacies of panacea shouters, although the prime ministership and cabinet quietly changed hands last summer.

Prime Minister Baldwin, feeling his policies generally approved, decided to call an election promptly instead of waiting until opposition strength might improve. Consequently on October 23 he announced that a common election would be held on November 14. Three weeks' notice!

How different from the United States, in which with our fixed election date the country begins to feel election fever from eight to fifteen months ahead of time. Likely candidates accept more invitations to make public speeches, while announcements and policies of the administration are gauged for their effect on the electorate. A haze of uncertainty and hopeful expectancy settles over affairs not unlike a fog, until the opening and closing of the polls clarifies the atmosphere.

Our British cousins have it on us in this respect. Instead of knowing for months ahead of the necessary visit to the dentist, they are given short notice and consequently little time for apprehension and worry. "This may hurt a little," says "Doc" Baldwin, "but we'll be finished in three weeks." —Star-Herald, Scottsbluff, Neb.

REVIEWPOINTS

November 28, 1935. I wish to ask a few questions in regard to water rates. First, the council holds each one will be rated as family users of water. How about water used for sprinkling gardens, flowers and lawns and trees? This would not pass through the sewer, yet we would be charged for it. No. 2.—We are taxpayers, pay for the sewer, but how does the village board or anybody else expect people who have never been able to pay for paving and other sewer bonds to pay such exorbitant bills? Of course men with good jobs or big incomes can meet them, but people with no jobs or incomes will be driven to the streets, certain to lose their homes because of high taxes. Can't the people have any chance to ever get back on their feet? MRS. O. D. ETTERS.
