WE BELIEVE YOU'LL HAVE A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Most of us can look back over the twelve months period which will end at midnight next Tuesday and be pleased with the upward trend in our financial affairs. Some can feel satisfaction, if not elation, from the results of the last 24 months of gradual upward trend.

Two years of slow but steady improvement form a sound and reasonable basis for belief that 1936 will usher in a condition approaching that of old time prosperity we like to recollect; and consequently, this New Year period is filled with genuine optimism rather than uncertain hope that was the best of the five preceding New Years could offer.

While hoping that a few national and international perturbing conditions which directly or indirectly affect all citizens can be altered or regulated, we have confidence that 1936 will be the best year in many for the majority of people and expressing that confidence we extend our sincere wishes for success and happiness to all of our readers.

SANTA CLAUS, MASTER-SALESMAN

The master salesman of them all is Santa Claus. Year after year the old gentleman has demonstrated his ability to move goods off the shelves and into the hands of happy and well-pleased customers.

Christmas injects a powerful stimulus into business and provides a new sentiment for buying and selling, transforming the routine business of bartering into a super-occasion.

It is a long cry from the three wise men who bore gifts across the desert to a child and the busy streets of thousands of cities throughout the world, but it is symbolic of the gifts borne by the three wise men that we think of Christmas in terms of gifts today.

Santa Claus is a merry old elf borrowed from Germanic legends, but he has been transmuted through the ages to fit perfectly with the Christmas scene despite the fact he evolved from a pagan belief.

It is interesting to reflect upon the manner in which two wholly dissociated faiths have contributed in a material way to the business done by Mr. Smith during the month of December in a little notion shop down the street... or to swell the receipts of the largest stores in New York or Chicago.

If the same enthusiastic relationship between buyer and seller as is exhibited at Christmas time could be maintained throughout the rest of the year, world economic problems would be solved once and for all time.—Daily Reporter, Spencer, Iowa.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

Of all new deal agencies, that closest to the heart of President Roosevelt is the Federal Valley Authority, which meets its fate before the Supreme Court Justice and submits its fate to their judgment. Poss represent utility and coal interests, seeking to have declared invalid contracts for disposal of the power to various municipalities and for acquiring distribution facilities of the Alabama Power company. Their attorneys seek to enlarge the question by declaring the TVA the entering wedge of Socialism.

TVA counsel reply that the sole question at issue is the government's right to dispose of power developed as an incident to navigation improvement, a right which times upheld by the court. Thus a decision sought on the continuance of the government's major effort to show how cheaply electric power may be produced and distributed so as to spread its use to the largest possible number of customers.

Partly to vindicate his record, partly in an attack on administrative policy, former President Hoover raises his voice to assert: The bank panic of 1933 was caused by fear of the Federal administration—the most political and unnecessary panic in history.

Hoover will quickly return if relief is turned back to states and localities, if the budget is balanced and if the dollar is stabilized.

The nation's welfare demands that we experiment and the "dance of the rain makers" which these on relief have entered enough from having play-boys take America apart to see how the whole goes round.

Who is lawless—Congress that passes laws of doubtful validity under the constitution, or lawyers associated with the Liberty league who advise their clients to disregard laws until the Supreme court passes on them? Here are two answers, one by Attorney General Homer Cummings, the other by Robert H. Jackson, counsel for the treasury. Says Mr. Jackson: Mass attacks on statutes, as carried out against the farm control and public utility laws, change the essential nature of judicial review. Formerly laws took effect unless and until set aside by the court. Under new Liberty League practices, the law is treated as a complete nullity until the supreme court says it can take effect. This is not orderly government; it is lawlessness. Assees Mr. Cummings: The supreme court has reversed itself many times, altering its decisions with change in prevailing opinions and in the light of unforeseen developments in the nation. For congress to refuse to enact a statute because of doubt regarding its validity would mean an end of new types of legislation and would bring to a halt essential activities of government to a standstill.

Who pays the cost of bringing increased purchasing power to the farmer through the farm program?

Answer of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration: No one, since farm prosperity generates more income in industrial centers than the program costs.

It presents these calculations in proof: The benefits of industrial mill production is directly traceable to farm spending.

Shipment of industrial products from 16 manufacturing states into agricultural states rose from 1932 and 1935 from $2 to 68 per cent.

The time is not ripe for applying the brake to business activity through action by the Federal Reserve Board.

So decides the board, despite the pleas of some bankers who want nearly 3000 million dollars of "excess reserves" lying idle but capable of supporting a huge inflation of bank money.

The board states: "The country is still short of recovery. There is no evidence of over-expansion of business activity or use of business credit. Hence no use at present of the excess reserve requirements or apply other checks on use of credit.

Explains S. Parker Gilbert, formerly agent general for the collection of reparations from Germany: "The excess reserves come largely from gold sent here as an incident to flight of capital from Europe. If and when this is withdrawn, the present large reserves will cushion American business against the shock."

Punch and Personality

ESTHER HULL DOOLITTLE

"Mother, may I stay at home from school today? Please, Mother!" Tears shone in the demure blue eyes of Martin Hopkins, Junior, aged six, as he dallied with his oatmeal in the Hopkins' sunny breakfast room.

"Of course not! The 'dear' Young Mrs. Hopkins, in crisp pink gingham, placed two squares of buttered toast on her son's plate with an air of finality. "Daddy wants to know every day whether you were a little boy or a smart man like Daddy? You like school, don't you, Martin?"

"Grandma had shakings from Martin caused a doubtful pause in Sally Hopkins' efficient domesticity. "Paul likes school," she remonstrated. "His mother says he's learned lots of songs and makes all kinds of pretty things to bring home. You wouldn't let Paul get ahead of you, would you, Son?"

Martin, Junior, gulped down a spoonful of very hot cereal, crammed some toast into his mouth and with no other sign of the inevitable rebellion in his soul, trudged off to school.

What kind of a world was it anyway, where everybody else did smart things while he could only wear an array of self-consciousness and hope to be overlooked? Revolt, unexpressed, and misinterpreted, even by himself, surged over the small boy many times during those first weeks of the term. Unhappiness manifested itself in bad temper, sulking and tears. One day, one day, presto! all was changed. Grandpa Hopkins came for a visit.

That night, in the friendliness of the front porch, with Martin, Junior, safely tucked in bed, Sally and Martin, Senior, unburdened their troubled hearts to Grandpa, concerning their son's woe—"lack of punch and personality." Grandpa, with certain tribal ceremonial, still blew feathers to the four cardinal points through tubes of cane.
